ENGLISH AND FRENCH TROOPS RUSHED TO AID OF BELGIANS TO FIGHT GERMAN INVADERS

English Forces Are Said To Have Landed In Belgium

UTMOST SECRECY PREVAILS IN REGARD TO PLACE OF DEBARKATION OR ROUTE TO BE TAKEN IN ADVANCE ON GERMANS.

REFUSE TO GRANT ARMISTICE

With Renewed Confidence at Assurances of Aid From Her Allies Belgium Continues to Defy Kaiser's Army—Fighting Reported in Luxemburg.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Aug. 8.—Indications that both British and French troops are hurrying to the assistance of the Belgians are given in French official dispatches today. The extent of the support is kept secret, as well as the route taken by the re-enforcements.

French cavalry is said to have arrived at Liege, where masses of German troops are moving forward to support the strong advance guard which was checked by the Belgians and, according to the reports of the Belgians, lost 25,000 men in killed, wounded and prisoners.

The German war offices declared the German check is not a defeat but the result of an heroic attempt of a small German force to advance in face of difficulties.

All eyes were turned today toward Belgium, where the unexpected stand of the Belgium army against a German advance guard has earned praise in all quarters.

British Troops Sent.

The authorities here have taken the great precaution to prevent the leakage of information as to naval and military movements, but indications were seen in the commandering of large liners and the stoppage of the cross channel passenger traffic that a British expeditionary force would probably soon depart.

The possible destination of this expedition could not be ascertained, and the report from Paris announcing the landing of British troops had evoked enthusiasm, carefully hid the place of their debarkation.

President Poincare also gave out the news in his message to King Albert of Belgium that French troops were "shedding their blood with the Belgians on the battlefield today."

Condemns False News.

Heated condemnation was voiced in the house of commons today of the dissemination of false news concerning the war, such as that published in regard to a great naval battle off the coast of Holland.

"It is absolutely false," said Reginald McKenna, the home secretary, and he hoped that the house would join him in the strongest condemnation of the publication of such reports." He continued:

"I do not say it is wilfully done in this case, but it might be wilfully done in order to assist the circulation of the paper.

"The publication of false news is a misdemeanor, and now that a press bureau with a constant stream of reliable information has been established the public has a right to expect that no such news will be published except when furnished by the press bureau."

Liege Forts Holding.

Paris, Aug. 8.—It is officially announced that the forts at Liege are holding out. The Germans who entered the city evacuated Friday before the arrival of the Belgian division which had come to the rescue. The evacuation was without military significance, as the fort commands the route and railroad. The withdrawal of the German troops, however, was an unquestioned moral defeat.

England Lands Troops.

Paris, Aug. 8.—It is officially announced today that English troops under the direction of French officers, are disembarking on French soil. The point of disembarkation is not revealed.

The disembarkation was made under the direction of French officers, and was witnessed by a crowd that cheered the Englishmen.

The operations of the Germans at Liege were based on the hypothesis of rapid success, consequently they were organized with little regard for provisioning the army. The Belgians regarded the advance for seventy-nine hours with the result that their army was increased with troops destined to reinforce Liege.

Belgians Most Confident.

The confidence of the Belgians has been increased by the suspension of hostilities as requested by the Germans. King Albert in an order to the third division and the fifteenth mixed brigade, who assisted in the heroic defense of Liege, took occasion to salute them and the army in the name of the nation, adding that France and her soldiers were coming to their help.

Germans Fail Completely.

Brussels, Aug. 8.—The war office has issued an official statement saying that one hundred and twenty-five thousand Germans participated in the assault of Liege, but that they completely failed to make any impression on the fortifications. Three army corps engaged in the attack were cut up and rendered useless, it is declared.

Soldiers returning here report that the trenches around Liege are literally filled with bodies of Germans. In some places the bodies are piled four and five deep.

French Cavalry Arrives.

A force of Frenc cvvalry arrived to the east of Liege today, according to an official announcement today.

The minister of war has received word that fighting has occurred between French and Germans in Belgium and Luxembourg.

Account of Fighting.

Paris, Aug. 8.—An official account of the fighting at Liege, Belgium, issued today, says:

"The German columns crossed the Belgium frontier during the night between August 3 and August 4.

"German cavalry came in contact with the Belgian advanced posts to the east of the fort at two o'clock in the afternoon of August 4.

"The plan of attack developed during the day of August 5. Each German column had different objective. Forts Fleron, Barchon and Evegnee constituted the northeastern section, being the first point, while the second column attacked the southeastern section, comprising forts Boncelles and Embourg."

French Invade Alsace.

Paris, Aug. 8.—French troops today entered Alsace and captured the village of Altkrich, near the Swiss frontier, seventeen miles west of Basel.

Another Engagement.

London, Aug. 8.—According to late dispatches this morning quite an important engagement between French and Germans occurred in Belgium-Luxembourg.

The Etoile Belge of Brussels learned from an official source that no decision has been reached on the question of an armistice at Liege, an engagement having begun elsewhere.

Germans Again Routed.

A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Brussels says that a division of German cavalry, which had succeeded in fording the Meuse to the north of Liege, was surprised and practically annihilated by Belgian cavalry and infantry supported by a b attery of light artillery. The German rout was complete. Seven German regiments surrendered.

Belgians Refuse Armistice.

The latest dispatches from Brussels indicate that the armistice of twenty-four hours asked for by the Germans has been refused by the Belgians.

M'GOVERN FILES HIS EXPENSE ACCOUNT

Madison, Wis., Aug. 8.—Governor McGovern has filed an expense account, apart from that of his personal campaign committee, totaling $498.76 in his campaign for United States senator. This sum includes $450 paid for space in the primary campaign pamphlet. J. N. Tittemore of Omro, candidate for congress reported expenditures of $372.91, through his committee, and Phillip Lehner of Princeton, his opponent, $476.82. Other candidates filing were: Congressman J. A. Frear, Hudson, $29.70; Willis Ludlow, Monroe, for lieutenant governor, $275; Charles B. Perry, Wauwatosa, for congress, $14; T. M. Kearney, Racine, for United States senator, $562.19; Victor Linley, Superior, for state senator, $9.30; John Theiler, Green county, for state senator, $10; John J. Esch, La Crosse, for congress, $17.90.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 8.—Charges of conspiracy brought by thirty local building contractors against F. C. Kenison and five other carpenters during the recent carpenters' strike in this city have been dismissed by Judge George Grimm of Jefferson, sitting for the local judge. The district attorney decided that he had no case and moved for dismissal.

PORTUGAL PROMISES SUPPORT TO BRITISH

Portuguese Parliament Votes to Abide by Ancient Treaty With England Says Lisbon Dispatch.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, August 8.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Lisbon says that at a special meeting of Parliament the declaration was made that Portugal would place herself unconditionally on the side of England according to the terms of her ancient treaty. The declaration was received with enthusiastic cheering for France and England.

Premier Machado in announcing the attitude of his government, said:

"According to our alliance we have duties which we in no way fail to realize."

Portuguese warships have been ordered to prepare for a cruise around the coast and foreign shipping in Portuguese ports has been notified to remove their wireless installation.

It is reported that the war office has ordered the mobilization of three military divisions.

Germany Makes Demand.

Lisbon, Portugal, Aug. 8.—Portugals decision to support Great Britain in the general European war was announced today after Germany had demanded information of her intentions.

MAPS OUT PROGRAM FOLLOWING FUNERAL

President Wilson Will Plunge Into His Work Upon His Return—Improve Banking.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, August 8. — President Wilson plans after his return from his wife's funeral, to plunge into work and continue active direction of the plans of assisting American abroad and relieving the financial situation in the United States.

Next Thursday he expects to receive the federal reserve to discuss plans for reorganizing the banking system and further meeting the situation growing out of the war in Europe. He will also do everything possible to assist the cotton growers of the south of solving the problem of getting their product to the mills and to the foreign markets.

The president will then devote his energy toward developing shipping under the American flag, to move the crops and supply food and clothing to the waring nations of Europe.

HOSPITAL SERVICE ARRANGED IN PARIS

American Ambulance Corps Prepare to Accommodate Those Wounded on Battlefield.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, August 8.—The American ambulance corps of Paris has taken a large building in Neuilly, which is to be transformed into a hospital to accommodate a large number of woundede. The twelve doctors including Dr. Joseph A. Blake of New York, and twenty-four nurses have volunteered for service. The women's auxilliary of the American ambulance corps is rapidly growing in number.

The organizers of the French red cross have received offers of hundreds of private houses to be used as hospitals, and the committee of the Conedie Francaise has applied to the minister of public instruction for permission to use the theatre as a hospital as in 1870.

ORDER FRISCO MINT TO PURCHASE SILVER

Washington, August 8.—The treasury department today gave orders to the San Francisco mint to buy 200,000 ounces of Silver at 51 cents an ounce. Officials hope this action may relieve to some extent conditions on the silver market which had been effected by the European war.

SUPREMACY ON SEAS TO DECIDE CONFLICT

ADMIRAL A. T. MAHAN, RETIRED, GIVES EXPERT'S OPINION OF EUROPEAN WAR.

SMALL GUNS EFFECTIVE

All Big Gun Ships May Not Inflict the Damage That is Generally Supposed, He Declares.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Quogue, L. I., Aug. 8.—"The most decisive strokes in the general European warfare will be delivered, in my belief, upon the sea, rather than upon the land," declared Rear Admiral Alfred T. Mahan, retired, in an interview here. "I look for an all-around naval conflict which should teach many things about sea-fighting craft, about guns and about armament."

"What will happen," the grizzled veteran of forty years of service in the American navy was asked, "when dreadnought meets dreadnought, when the tremendously powerful, modern superbattleships, with their fourteen-inch guns and their thousand or more men to the ship, get together? Will the problem of their worth, their effectiveness, be settled?"

"The problem of the A. B. G. (or 'all big gun) ship is a highly interesting one," Admiral Mahan replied, "and we may learn through this war of its worth. But the lesson will not be shown in any ship-for-ship fight. Dreadnought against dreadnought will be no different than one old frigate against another old frigate in the days gone by.

"The really interesting and instructive combat would be between, say, a dozen dreadnoughts and a dozen and a half smaller vessels, for instance, of ordinary battleship size. We might then see whether or not the twelve and fourteen-inch gun is of so great importance as has lately been assumed."

The admiral intimated that from what data he had been able to obtain it was likely that the very big gun might prove to be a much over-rated weapon.

"In the Russo-Japanese war, I believe—and many other naval officers agree with me—the bulk of the damage was done by the eight and ten-inch guns," he said. "In that conflict I think it was shown that the volume of fire, the number of hits, was much more important than the single shots from great guns, and I believe this war will prove the same thing.

"For example, imagine a single shot from a 14-inch gun hitting an enemy's ship. It does tremendous damage, certainly. But, one might almost say, it does too much damage; that is, if experts more power than is necessary to cripple the adversary. Two shots from eight-inch guns would be much more effective in battle than one fourteen-inch shot.

"I cannot say that I agree with the idea of the A. B. G. ships. England, of course, originated the dreadnought, and cackled like a chicken that had laid an egg and got every one else building A. B. Gs. But I think all the navies are coming around to what we call the 'mixed-battery' ship, and that is as it should be.

"The original dreadnought idea was a ship with all big guns of twelve or fourteen-inch caliber and a few smaller guns, say three or four-inch caliber, for use against torpedo-boats. But the size of the lesser battery has been creeping up year by year, until our newest ships have six-inch guns with the fourteens, and I understand some vessels have eight-inch guns, which are pretty sizeable weapons for any use.

"I believe this war will show that a well distributed fire by the medium-sized guns will do much more damage than the slower single shots of the big fellows."

"May this possibly mean a return to the use of smaller-caliber guns?" Admiral Mahan was asked.

"The results of the naval battles will tell; that cannot be said now," he replied.

The admiral declined to comment upon the comparative fighting ability or gunnery of the nations involved or to be involved. Nor would he advance any theories as to the damage likely to be inflicted upon the extremely large fighting craft by submarines or by air craft.

ALLOW RESERVITES TO LEAVE AMERICA

Foreign Residents in United States Subject to Military Servivce May Return to Native Lands.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Under new regulations European reservites will be allowed to sail for their own countries if they are not in uniform, do not carry arms and go as individuals.

These instructions were designed with the idea that the responsibility and burden of deciding questions of international law shall be passed along by collectors to the treasury and state department.

"We think clearance must be granted when supposed reservites go as individuals and not as organized military, unless there are other grounds for withholding."

This was the message sent to Dudley Field Malone, collector of customs at New York, by the department of commerce today, in answer to his inquiries as to whether the steamer Rochambeau, preparing to leave New York for France with a number of supposed reservites, should be allowed to depart.

The instructions to Mr. Malone in this case, it was said by officials here, might constitute a precedent to be followed in all cases where reservites were preparing to leave to join the armies of their home countries.

The status of the German liner Vaterland was laid before the counselor of the state department by the charge of the German embassy, but no decision was reached.

MAYOR OF FRENCH TOWN URGES GOOD TREATMENT OF GERMAN PRISONERS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Belfort, France, August 8.—The mayor of this city issued a proclamation to the inhabitants today calling on them to treat German prisoners with respect, and not to display a hostile attitude toward them in spite of the reported execution by Germans of a number of Alsatian youths who were endeavoring to cross into France to join the French army.

AMERICAN AND WIFE ARRESTED AS SPIES IN BAVARIAN TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. Huntington of New York City Taken By German Police. —Tourist Ends Life.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, Aug. 8.—Archer M. Huntington, president of the American Geographical Society, and his wife were arrested at Nuremburg, Bavaria, by German police, and are now held in prison as spies.

Chauffeur Sends Word.

Mr. Huntington's chauffeur, who escaped to Switzerland, telegraphed to the American embassy here yesterday saying Mr. and Mrs. Huntington have been maltreated. Mr. Huntington, he said, had been stripped naked, while the police were searching him, and his wife was subjected to indignities and insults.

Ambassador Herrick telegraphed to Washington last night and it is assumed here that the state department is taking action.

Is Prominent New Yorker.

New York, Aug. 8.—Archer M. Huntington, arrested with his wife at Nuremberg, Bavaria, and thrust into prison as spies, is the son of the late Collis P. Huntington, the railroad builder. Mr. Huntington and his wife have been abroad since May.

Mr. Huntington is president of the American Geographic Society, American Numismatic Society and the Hispanic American Museum of this city. He is about forty-five years old and a resident of New York.

Woman Tourist Ends Life.

London, Aug. 8.—Mrs. James T. Macey committed suicide today as the result of a nervous breakdown caused by the privation endured since she was ordered out of her sick bed at Antwerp on Monday. She arrived in London seriously ill. She left her mother and child in Germany.

Cardinal's Party Safe.

New York, Aug. 8.—Cardinal Farley and his party, as to whose safety abroad there has been some anxiety, are safe at Brunnen, Switzerland, according to a private cablegram received here today. The dispatch added that the date of their return was uncertain.

OHIO IN THE MIDST OF GREAT CAMPAIGN

State Wide Primaries for Starter—Suffrage and Prohibition Question—Other Issues.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Columbus, Ohio, August 7.—Ohio is in the midst of the greatest political campaign in its history. The first state-wide primaries to be held August 11 furnish a starter. Then woman suffrage, anti-saloon and liquor forces will file three separate petitions to place constitutional senatorial amendments before the voters at the November elections. The regular state, senatorial and congressional campaigns will come as a matter of course.

Woman suffrage workers, defeated two years ago when voters refused to write a "votes for women" clause in the state constitution, are back this year with an initiative petition to place a constitutional amendment providing equal suffrage on the ballot in November. This state will be one of the seven to vote on woman suffrage this fall. The national organization is concentrating its strength here because Ohio is the largest state and is the most eastern. Suffragists believe if Ohio adopts equal suffrage, New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and New Jersey will follow its lead when they vote on the question next year. Anti-saloon forces planned to place a constitutional amendment providing state-wide prohibition before the voters next year. Their plans were changed when liberal forces initiated an amendment which would repeal the present county option law and prevent a vote being taken on state-wide prohibition. The "drys" immediately circulated petitions to place a state-wide prohibition amendment before the voters at the same time—at the November election. Attorney General Hogan has ruled that in case both amendments should carry, the one receiving the largest number of affirmative votes would be written into the constitution.

The primaries have attracted the attention of politicians throughout the country because of the entrance of former United States Senator Joseph B. Foraker, of Cincinnati into the republican senatorial race. He seeks to "come back" and is making his fight as a "stand patter." Showing much of his old time vigor that won for him the name of "Fire Alarm Joe", Foraker is campaigning the state giving his explanation of the now famous "Standard Oil Letters."

His opponents are Warren G. Harding of Marion, former lieutenant governor and former Congressman Ralph D. Cole, of Findlay. Harding always has been known as a staunch supporter and friend of Foraker. He jumped into the fight after a conference with the former senator. What was discussed at that meeting has not been told. Cole is making his campaign as a protectionist. In the Democratic senatorial race, Attorney General Timothy S. Hogan, is opposed to former Congressman John J. Lentz, of Columbus, who is advocating government ownership of telegraph lines; and John L. Zimmerman, of Springfield, who is making a quiet campaign. A L. Garford, Elyria manufacturer, is the Progressive candidate. He has no opposition at the primaries.

ITALY WILL REFUSE TO ASSIST GERMANY IS REPORT AT ROME

King Victor in Outburst Said to Have Declared "He Would Not Sell His Honor Or That of His Country."

Rome, August 8.—A statement attributed to King Victor Emanuel in reply to the insistance of the representatives of Germany and Austria Hungary who continually augmented their offers in order to obtain the active cooperation of Italy in the politics of the two Teutonic empires, has aroused much discussion in political circles here. The King of Italy is said to have burst out with the exclamation:

"Neither friendship for my allies nor offers made by them no matter how advantageous would persuade me to sell my honor and that of my country."

Queen Helena with her children returned to the Quirinal today, as her majesty desired not to be far away from the King, during the present grave situation.

She said: "My place in case of danger is beside my husband."

Welcome Wilson's Offer.

U. S. ATTEMPTS TO PREVENT ANY CLASH

Sillman is Asked to Urge Carranza and Carbajal to Communicate.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Aug. 8.—The United States made further effort today to avert the clash of constitutionalists and the Carbajal government at Mexico City. Telegrams to American Consul Silliman urged him to pursuade Carranza to enter into direct communication with Carbajal.

Jose Castellot, personal representative of Carbajal, conferred with secretary Bryan and then telegraphed Carbajal, urging him to offer to surrender the government if amnesty and guarantee were given. Should the latter condition not be accepted by Carranza, Mr. Castello said armed resistance was inevitable.

SUIT ON NEW HAVEN RAILROAD STARTED

Suit to Compel Directors of Wrecked Road to Restore Millions to Stockholders in Court.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Boston, August 7.—The bitter legal battle, long threatened, to compel New Haven directors to restore to the stockholders $306,000,000 alleged to be due through their default of the judiciary trust was finally joined in the Supreme Judicial Court here today. First rumored last winter then revived by the Interstate Commerce Commission suit, and finally filed today after the Interstate Commerce Commissions scathing condemnation of the road and its directors, the suit seeks the appointment of a receiver for the road and the issue of an injunction restraining sale or transfer of any stock of the defendant directors. It has been brought by the law firm of Whipple, Sears and Ogden in the nature of an equity suit for Ralph Bartlett, trustee for the estate of Olea Bull Vaughn, owner of 50 shares.

The bill of complaint declares that the defendants, through the illegal acquisition of the Boston and Maine, trolley and steamship properties, are bound to pay the New Haven's treasury $162,000,000 withdrawn for illegal and ultra vires purposes. Losses from these acquisitions are said to total $102,000,000, recovery to three-fold that figure being allowed under the anti-trust act.

Preliminary to the main question as to the actual guilt and liability of the directors, the defense, led by Counsel Moorfield Storey will probably make contest on two points.

First it is claimed that under the Federal anti-trust laws action should only be taken in the Federal courts. Secondly it is maintained that one stockholder having only fifty shares out of 30,000 has no right to tie up all the property represented by the stock of the defendants. If these two points are decided against the defense it is thought plea will be made for continuance until the outcome of the Federal suit in New York is available.

Great interest attaches to the suit here, and when the case was called today many of he best known lawyers in Boston were within the rail.

The Bully and Reason.

The bully depends on main strength. A bullying nation is as disgusting as a bullying man. A strong man, morally and physically, relies on his sense of justice, a strong nation has "a decent respect to the opinions of mankind," and will be as sensitive of its honor in keeping its word, as an upright man in his dealings with others. The bully will not reason.

STATE GOLF PLAYERS TO MEET NEXT WEEK

STATE TOURNAMENT IN MILWAUKEE WILL BE AFFAIR OF MUCH INTEREST.

GOSSIP ON POLITICS

Candidates are Finding Out Many Unpected Things With Reference to State Election Laws.

(By Ellis B. Usher.)

Milwaukee, August 8.—The Wisconsin Golf Association will hold its annual state tournament at the Milwaukee country club, beginning Tuesday, August 11. Golf clubs from all over the state will be represented. Kenosha, who had the tourney last year, Racine, Madison Janesville, Fond du Lac, Sheboygan, Beloit, Eau Claire, Marinette, Menomonee and two Milwaukee clubs have all entered their star players. Undoubtedly the best golf that Wisconsin has ever seen will be exhibited.

There is little "inside dope." A flash of extraordinary on the part of any one of a dozen men will upset all calculations. "Ned" Allis, Milwaukee, Dick Cavanaugh, Kenosha, Frank Jacobs, Madison and Harold Wyatt, Fond du Lac, are probably semi-final men. A final choice is "Ned" Allis. His recent baptism of fire at the Western Amateur at Grand Rapids should temper him into cold steel. The "cracking" of a golfer however, is an erratic thing. Men apparently without nerves, often break most unexpectedly.

"Dark horses" in golf are frequent. Fred Zwaska of the Blue Mound has played in championship form. The strain of a crucial match, however, will probably prove too much for him, as he is a new player. The battle for supremacy, however, will, under ordinary circumstances be fought out between Allis and Cavanaugh, with the former having a 'shade' the better of the fight.

Wisconsin Election Laws.

The people are trying to break into the Wisconsin campaign by the convention route, both Democrats and Republicans, are finding out a lot of things about our new election laws. First and foremost, they discover that every law has been passed legalizing and recognizing the legalization of parties, is an obstruction to independent political action, which used to be considered one of the dearest of American liberties. Those who have attempted to exercise their right "peaceably to assemble," which is one of the first rights guaranteed by the constitution, are jeered as "outlaws." Of what value is an assemblage that is shorn of all right to make its purpose effective? The epithet—"outlaw"—may be accurately measured by anyone who will take the trouble to refer to the election returns of recent years, all of which prove the astonishing growth of minority rule in Wisconsin.

I understand that the attorney general rules that the law which says that a candidate for the United States senate may spend $7,500, a candidate for governor, $5,000, and each of the other candidates for state office a fixed sum, thus limits the expense for an entire state ticket to about $19,500, and no more money can be spent for the ticket without violating the law. To make this clearer, if a meeting for Judge Karel or Mr. Phillip should be held in Oshkosh or La Crosse, or any other place, the cost, even if paid by the local supporters of the gentleman, would have to be reported as a part of the $5,000, each is entitled to spend. If it was a meeting in the interest of the whole ticket the charge would be against each candidate proportionately, up to the amount the law permits him to spend. This is a lawyer's opinion not mine, and he tells me that this is the limit for the committee, as well as for the candidates, for these committees of the Karel and Philipp campaigns, are "outlaws" too. They don't represent a legal party organization. They are merely "personal" representatives of the candidates, and any contribution to the committee must be for the benefit of a particular candidate or else the committee must split it up among the several candidates in proportion to the amount he may legally spend. In short, these beautiful laws make it practically impossible for independents to organize and co-operate and fill the independent path with every conceivable legal peril. Citizens of Wisconsin no longer enjoy the right to organize and act in politics, except for existing party organizations, except under most restricted conditions.

Power of State Machine.

On the other side, the state administration, with its standing army of officials and appointees, has probably something approximating an average of 75 or 100 men in each of the state's 71 counties, each of whose bread and butter depends upon the success of his particular Progressive ticket. I have not overestimated the power and comprehensiveness of the McGovern machine. Senator La Follette's attack on McGovern proves that he knows the University and the Normal schools are now in the governor's camp. Mr. Hatton's state board of public affairs, with its ability to threaten investigation, may have helped to rob "Bob" of this hitherto most efficient co-laborer.

Whatever the voters accomplish this fall will depend upon themselves, individually. If they like high taxes and extravagance they will continue. If not, they must save themselves. Nobody can save them. There is no more hope of organizing this state for Karel and Philipp than there is of peace in Europe. The voters must see first to their legislative candidates. No one can prevent greater expenses next year unless most of the laws of last session are repealed. If the voters want a change they can have one but they must not rely on anybody to effectively organize the state for them, for it can not be done. Every community must organize itself.

American Banks Strong.

The European war finds the banks of the United States stronger than ever before in their history. This is largely due to the conditions created by the new currency law, because they have all been holding on to their cash, and have forced conservatism upon their customers, until they could see what would happen under the new system. Thus the enforced stagnation of the past few months may prove a real blessing. Wisconsin banks have been particularly conservative with the result that there is more idle money in their vaults than at any time in their history. This, in view of the war crisis, is a very comfortable situation and will prove valuable to Wisconsin business and credit.

Erie Fire Tugs.

(Advertisement.)

The latest thing in railroading in the addition of the Erie Railroad's terminal tugs, the Alice Stafford and the Frederick U. Robbins, to Chicago's fire fighting forces. They are both equipped with fire fighting appliances, and the railroad has placed them at the disposal of the city fire department in case of emergency. This is another example of the Erie's alert usefulness.

Another bit of Erie enterprise was illustrated in a world's record made the other day by the new monster locomotive which has been described in these letters. It was put in the center of a train, so that it pushed half of it and pulled the other half, the result was that it moved 230 loaded freight cars at fifteen mile an hour pace. This train was the equivalent of 12 or 15 freight trains of a few years ago, when 30 little cars made a train and the cars were about one-fifth the capacity of those hauled today.

Who Invented Chess?

The honor of inventing chess has been claimed by at least fourteen nations, and a variety of famous persons have been mentioned as sole inventor, ranging from Japhet and Shem to King Solomon and Aristotle. It is, however, generally agreed that Europe got the game from the Arabic, "checkmate" being a corruption of "Shah mat" ("the king is dead").

WHITE WINS BOUT WHICH IS STOPPED

Azevedo Saved From Knockout When White Has Portuguese Helpless In 18th Round.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 8.—Charlie White added another victory here last night when he battered Joe Azevedo into submission until the eighteenth round of their scheduled twenty round mill last night. Referee Griffen stopped the bout, as Azevedo was helpless before the attack of the Chicago boy.

White hammered down Azevedo's defense and was only prevented from scoring a knockout by injured hands. Azevedo was game to the finish, for the last two rounds he was barely able to raise his hands to guard.

PITCHERS' BATTLE EXPECTED TOMORROW

Fans Expect Crandall to Increase His Strikeout Record Materially Sunday Afternoon.

Eight runs, twenty-two hits in four games or forty-one innings is the record that George Crandall has made on the pitching mound for the Janesville Cardinals in the last two weeks' games, and on Sunday when the Cardinals meet Whitewater at the fair grounds, Crandall will probably fatten this average.

While Crandall has been keeping the Cardinal rivals under cover with his skilled hurling, the Cardinal swatsmen have learned to use their war clubs, as evidenced by their heavy scores in the last two games. Sixteen scores were made in the Edgerton game and the Cards pounded the ball hard and often.

Watch for Valuable Paper.

Not a scrap of paper is permitted to be carried out in the United States treasury department until it has passed the censorship of the official examiners of the waste baskets. For years they have been doing this work, and have saved the government the amounts of their salaries many times over. Some time back one of them found in a waste-basket a $10,000 United States coupon bond.

SCOTTY TRAINS HARD FOR MAHONEY MATCH

Milwaukee Featherweight in Fine Condition for Ten Round Bout With Kid Mahoney.

Young Scotty, Milwaukee featherweight, is putting on the finishing touches to his training for his bout with Kid Mahoney for ten rounds, before the Bower City Athletic Club Wednesday night, August 12th. Scotty is at Jones Island and at present dows to weight, around 122 pounds and is ready for the sound of the gong.

Scotty is an opposite type of fighter from Mahoney for the Milwaukee featherweight is a rushing Bat Nelson style of a battler and has a powerful punch and wicked attack to back his rushes up. This does not mean that Scotty is not clever, but instead of dancing around the ring out of harm's way, Scotty is always dancing right into trouble for a chance to slug home blows. There has never been a boxer in Jasesville that has performed before the Bower City club that had the ability to land punches that Scotty has shown. The Milwaukee lad can hit coming and going and his back hand swings in the infighting are like a trip hammer while his uppercuts and body jolts are powerful and quick.

Scotty first appeaed here against Bobby Ward, the Beloit bear cat in the opening exhibition, when Scotty was substituted the last moment. This time Scotty failed to make a showing, for in six rounds Ward held him off for a draw. The pair were rematched at Beloit and in the fifth round Scotty put Ward through the ropes—the bout was stopped, as Ward was helpless. Scotty then fought Patsy Haley, of Buffalo in the preliminary to the Ritchie-Welsh fight in Milwaukee and earned a draw, although Haley almost floored Scotty in the first round on a lucky punch. Scotty then was matched with Battling Cox of this city and the local boy was helpless before the savage attack of the Jones Islander. It was plain to be seen that Scotty had vastly improved in his boxing at this exhibition, for he had quickened his punches and blocked better.

With steam and precision Scotty can land with either hand and is mighty handy with his left mit, which he shoots across with amazing speed and force. No matter how clever Kid Mahoney will be, it is safe to say that Scotty will not give him an inch of ground, for when in the ring, Scotty is like an enraged bull dog. Considering dope, Scotty has an even break to win, for Scotty gave Bert Hart a bad lacing in Milwaukee when Hart weighed 130 pounds against Scotty's 124 pounds. Hart earned a decision over Dick Loadmen while Mahoney had to go his hardest against Loadman in a recent Milwaukee bout. On the other hand Mahoney whipped Patsy Branigan and the same Patsy gave Matty McCue the worst of two matches, one in Milwaukee and the other in Racine. Scotty knocked out Young Sharkey in four rounds. Sharkey appeared in the local ring.

A number of Janesville ef fans saw Mahoney in action against Ritchie Mitchel, before the Wolgast-Ritchie fight in Milwaukee and the Kid made a good showing, despite the advantageous height and reach of his rival. Mahoney had to jump off his feet to hit Mitchel in the face, but was clever enough to keep away from the haymaker swings that were being aimed at him while leading.

Young Scotty has been in the game for two years and has a reputation ahead of him if he wins this bout and in consequence is preparing for the battle of his life. Scotty expresses no fear of his skilled opponent and he may surprise the fans.

The semi-windup bout between Hal Clark, Milwaukee and Barney Griffen, Chicago, promises to be a good match between two hard hitting and rugged lightweights. Clark has battled in many main bouts and is a feared man in this territory. Griffen has declared that if Clark does not weight in at 135 at three o'clock in the afternoon he will not box and President Ihrig in signing the men, specified that the weght be 135 pounds. It is said Clark abhors hard training and if he does not make weight, Billy Crammer will meet Clark. The Bower City club is paying Crammer's training expenses, bu it is hoped that Clark will come down to the mark, although Crammer would give the fans a good run, for he is one of the most deceptive and clever men in Chicago.

Griffen is twenty years old and has fought twenty battles in the last year. Griffen claims a decision over Hal Clark in six rounds at Milwaukee and Clark claims a victory over Griffen at Grand Rapids, Mich., and both have blood in their eye. Eight knock outs are included in Griffens record, including Young Walsh, Farmer Smith, Fighting Black, Red Beebe, Archer and a host of lesser lights. A fast six rounds is expected between Waussow, Milwaukee and Bill Klein, of Freeport, at 127 pounds. Waussow is a tough man, while Klein is a practically unknown in this section.

Sport Snap Shots

Johnny Kilbans refusal to meet Matt Brock, the Cleveland feather, in Canton has elicited some little displeasure from the many who were anxious to see the fight. Brock is a great favorite in Cleveland, and in fact throughout Ohio, and many of his supporters declare that he would stir things up a bit for the champ. Kilbane has evaded bouts with Brock several times, many allowing that the champion doesn't care to fight the Jewish boy if he can help it. This is hardly likely, the real reason being that Kilbane and Brock have long been cordial enemies, and Johnny doesn't want to help Brock in any way. He had demanded a $4,000 guarantee, and when this had been promised him he finally announced that he was going to the coast to fight Dundee. The Brock-Kilbane go would have been of great interest in Ohio, but hardly beyond there, as Brock is scarcely known outside of his native state. Jimmy Dunn, Kilbanes manager, says that the chances of getting $4,000 out of the fight seemed very thin, and so he decided to take Johnny to the coast. Ohio fight fans declare, however, that sooner or later Kilbane will have to meet Brock.

Anyone wishing to buy a few ball [redacted] ger Birmingham of the Naps. Birmingham has a nice list of players he would like to dispose of, some of them with large reputations, such as Larry Lajoie prominent second baseman. Some of those Birmy has for sale are Leibold, an outfielder; Blanding and Collamore, pitchers; Olson, Lajoie and Johnston, infielders, and Carisch, a catcher. It is being agreed in Cleveland that what are called drastic measures will be necessary if the Naps are to show any life and take on the aspects of a regular ball club. So the whole lineup is being severely stirred about, and perhaps by the end of the present season the Naps will show some sort of shape. A great deal of excess baggage will have to be thrown out before it happens, and Birmingham is preparing to make the changes.

Whether or not they get lost on the deal, Cleveland fans were glad to see Vean Gregg go to the Red Sox. Gregg, at one time the popular idol of Cleveland, finally came to be cordially disliked. The regard was felt on both sides, as Gregg said when he left that Cleveland fans were the most fickle and unjust, not to say half-witted, that he had ever known. He went on along this line, scoring them most bitterly. The fans, on the other hand, said that Gregg stalled on the job and wasn't giving his team the best that was in him. And as he had little bickerings with most every one on the team, as well as with Charley Somers, the club owner, it was agreed on all sides that he might as well go. Gregg is a wonderful pitcher under happy circumstances, but he was of little use to the Naps.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE APOLLO.

"The Perils of Pauline" which begins at the Apollo Sunday, is admitted to be the greatest series of motion picture plays ever produced and shown to the public by any firm. The players, the authors and Pathe rtsources guarantee the quality of the production. The story is clean and wholesome, yet with plenty of thrills, adventures, narow escapes, villany and love scattered throughout. The grandest scenic efftcts; the most thriling, almost unbelievable spectacular acidents appear in every episode. Those who see the first episode on Sunday will want to follow the story right through.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

"Better be safe than sorry," is the slogan recently adopted by the "Safety First society" of New York, and while it applies directly to railroads and more especially to automobile drivers, it contains more good advice to people generally than any short paragraph ever written. Automobile accidents are of such common occurrence in New York that the Evening World was permitted to say, not long ago:

"The Safety First society starts its educational campaign with a special notice in the newspapers warning motorists to be considerate of life and limb in the streets of the city.

"Go slow around corners and when approaching crossings. Go slow where traffic is dense and where children are playing in the streets. Stop behind street cars taking on or discharging passengers. Use tire chains on wet or slippery pavements. 'Better be safe than sorry,' it admonishes every one who sits behind a steering wheel.

"The society deserves all possible aid from the public. Slaughter in the streets of New York has reached a point where it is no longer to be endured.

"Last week an inexperienced girl, driving a car for the first time, seriously injured four people. A chauffeur ran down and killed a woman last Sunday. His employers afterward admitted having 'noticed for some time that his sight and hearing were failing.'

"These are only samples of the scandalous and criminal license with which vehicles as destructive as locomotives are driven by incompetent hands through the crowded streets of New York.

"Any one who witnesses an auto accident should send the number of the automobiles involved, together with his own address and telephone number, to the Safety First society at No. 501 Fifth avenue.

"It is time to down the motor menace. The way to do it is promptly to fix full responsibility for all machines —not on numbers but on persons."

This humane society is engaged in conducting a national educational campaign through the press of the country, and every paper in the land should lend its space and influence, for the number of automobile accidents reported daily is appalling, and the most of them may be traced directly to carelessness.

These conditions exist because an army of raw recruits develop as full-fledged engineers, in a day, and attempt to handle a road engine, which contains more possibilities of danger, on the streets and country roads, than the iron horse which travels the track over which it was built to run.

These new drivers soon develop the speed mania and become a menace on the public highways. The only wonder is that accidents are not of more frequent occurrence. It is doubtful if anything can be done to regulate them until stringent laws are passed and rigidly enforced.

A car which is speeding over a country road at more than twenty miles an hour is never under perfect control, and yet this is considered a slow pace by the average driver, who is always in a hurry to "get there" and for no reason which he can define.

There was a time when the farmer stood in the dust at his gateway and watched the tourists roll by, with a curse on his lips, and a spirit of envy in his heart, but this is of the past, for today the average farmer drives a car with reckless abandon, and as ignorant of the rights of the road as his city competitor.

He is still possessed of the notion that he owns by Divine right the roadway in front of his farm, and so continues to plow it up and make it impassable. A few bumps and a broken spring, now and then, may remind him of the fact that the roadway belongs to the public, and he has no more right to obstruct it than has the city man to tear up the street in front of his house.

"Better be safe than sorry" is a good motto to adopt in the affairs of every day life. The man who is burning the candle at both ends always finds time to repent, before the journey is completed, and it often happens that bitter sorrow fills his cup before the race is half run.

The boy who cultivates a habit for drink, not because he likes the stuff, but just to be a good fellow, is paving the way for a season of regret, and if there is anything in this world that is destitute of satisfaction, it is regret, especially where we are alone responsible.

Sorrow may be left for the heart of the mother, who watched over the boy with loving solicitude, for the thing which causes us regret usually means sorrow, and the mother comes in for her full share.

There are some homes where the wife and mother would give all that she possesses to honorably break the bonds which confine her to the place called home, because the title has long seemed to her a travesty.

A double portion of sorrow and regret has come to her as a sad experience, because she never knew the man she married until he became her life companion.

"Better be safe than sorry" might not be a good proposition for the girls to adopt, as it would doubtless add materially to the crop of unmarried women, but it would prevent hasty action, and make married life less of a lottery.

The war cloud now hanging over Europe, appeared on the horizon like thunder-bolts out of a clear sky, and the people in this country are wondering what it is all about. A German, who had been here for twenty years, when asked if he was going back to help the "vaterland," said: "Not much! Let 'em fight it out. When I fight I fight for this country." And an Austrian, replying to the same question, said: "Let Francis Joseph fight his own battles."

Many of the people of these war-cursed countries, feel the same way, and it is to be regretted that a dozen crowned heads could not have been corraled on some desert island and left to fight it out.

The feeling of regret, which now fills the civilized world, will have its aftermath in sorrow, for many lives will be sacrificed, and many homes despoiled. Somebody has made a grave mistake, through hasty action.

In the meantime our own country occupies an enviable position. The Mexican situation loses significance and our political battlefield is not dangerous. As a nation we are at peace with all mankind, and as a people we are still the supreme rulers of our destiny.

The advice of our president, to keep cool and not get excited, is worth observing. The day of the dynasty is passing, and while no one may predict the outcome of the present struggle, it is safe to assume that the final result will show an advance in civilization, for war has always been the great civilizer.

The American people may be impulsive but they are usually safe and sane, for tho principle expressed in the slogan, "Better be safe than sorry," has long been observed.

On The Spur of The Moment

Too Strenuous.

I wouldn't want to be a king and not know when I'd have to scoot;
I'd hate to dodge those cannon balls when subjects start to revolute
'Tis not a joy at break of day but rather it's a beastly bore
To dash, in one's pajamas clad, out of the palace kitchen's door.
Then sail out on the raging main and not know where you're going to land.
A melancholy figure is the monarch who has just been canned.

Of course it's great to have a throne and sit around in gorgeous ease,
And wear clothes that are tailor-made, with pants that don't bag at the knees.
'Tis rather pleasant not to have to worry o'er the price of coal,
Or hold yourself responsible to any living, breathing soul;
But when you once get used to this, to lose it simply raises hob.
The most forlorn thing in the world must be a king without a job.

No anarchists have got me marked; they plan to throw no bombs at me;
They drop no strychnine in my soup nor shot me up in fiendish glee;
I have no trouble sleeping nights; I dare walk on the streets alone,
An old hard-bottomed office chair is all that I can call a throne.
The poor folk have their victories, though titled monarchs may deride,
And, 'twixt a potentate and me, I guess I'm quite well satisfied.

He Did His Duty.

"Then you won't marry me?"

"No, Archibald I will not."

"You will not change your mind and be sorry afterward that you refused me?"

"Positively not."

"This, I suppose, is final."

"Absolutely."

"And there will be no come-back?"

"None."

"You realize what you are doing?"

"Yes, I do. I wouldn't marry you if you were the last man on earth?"

"Thank heaven!" murmured the old bachelor. "I have done my duty. You are an angel, Maggie. I am going to send you up a box of flowers. I was afraid you might accept me. Now, having been disappointed in love, I will never have to propose again."

Musings of a Pessimist.

A kid has to be in college only about three weeks to know more than his parents, his grandparents and all of his other ancestors combined.

Let a man alone and he will make a monkey of himself at some time in his life, and he will do it whether you let him alone or not.

It doesn't take brains to get by nowadays. It takes nerves.

There never was a time in the history of this country when there was not something wrong with the tariff.

Some women will paint their faces, wear two or three bushels of false hair, pull themselves out of shape so as to get into a corset, wear high heeled shoes three sizes to small, lie about their husband's incomes, wear indecent skirts, beat their grocerymen and butchers in order to keep an automobile, and then wonder why their daughters don't grow up to be high-thinking and modest young women.

Wonderful.

He's a wonderful kid
And us folks never did
See his beat.
He has feet,
He has teeth by the score,
And he's getting some more.
He has ears and a nose
And a full set of toes;
He has eyes and some hair,
And ten fingers, so there!
He can walk.
He can talk.
What d'ye know about that?
Ain't he great? Tell us flat,
Did you folks ever see
Any greater, by gee?
He can smell of a flower.
He can yell by the hour.
You can hear him a mile.
He can smirk. He can smile.
He can eat with a spoon.
He can laugh. He can croon.
Of course you may say
That all kids are that way.
But he is a wonder.
A wonder, by thunder.
But this, I opine,
He's a wonderful kid
Because he is mine.

COUNTY DEMOCRATS SEND MESSAGE TO PRESIDENT

Rock County Democratic Committee Sends Message of Condolence to President Wilson.

At a meeting of the Rock county committee of the Wilson democrats yesterday afternoon, the chairman was ordered to send the following message of condolence to the president:

August 7, 1914.

The Hon. Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.

Accept the sincere sympathy of the democracy of Rock county in your great sorrow.

Division of Labor.

While it takes 40 persons to make a washboard, 120 to make a shoe, somewhere between fifty and sixty to construct a corset, a score or more to manufacture a single pair of overalls, and equal numbers to produce other simple articles in daily use, the task of proportioning to the worker a fair wage for his or her exertions is not so simple a matter as some would have us believe. But a fair division would be a much easier problem to solve were each worker placed on an equality in bargaining.

Wild Cat in Scotland.

A wild cat has been caught in Ardnamurchan deer forest, Argyllshire, Scotland, by a gamekeeper. The animal is very large, measuring 45 inches in length. It has a short, bushy tail, and is dark in color with brown stripes. It stands high on its legs and has a very tigerish appearance.

Has Your Child Worms?

Most children do. A Coated, Furred Tongue; Strong Breath; Stomach Pains; Circles under Eyes; Pale, Sallow Complexion; Nervous, Fretful; Grinding of Teeth; Tossing in Sleep; Peculiar Dreams—any one of these indicate Child has Worms. Get a box of Kickapoo Worm Killer at once. It kills the Worms—the cause of your child's condition. Is Laxative and aids Nature to expel the Worms. Supplied in candy form. Easy for children to take. 25c., at your Druggist.

FACTS ESSENTIAL IN CHANGE OF POLICY

So Says De Witt Elwood of Charlestown, Ill., Who Is Aiding in University Survey.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 8.—"In considering a change in policy or change in administration facts are essential, not personal opinions or prejudices. It is to ascertain the facts that a survey is being made of the University of Wisconsin. And these are to be scientifically determined facts, and the particular facts which are necessary to the proper understanding of the institution, its field and its methods."

This is the statement of De Witt Elwood of Charleston, Ill., who has contributed more than a month of his vacation to the university survey, now being conducted by the board of public affairs under the direction of Dr. William H. Allen of New York. Mr. Elwood returned to Charlestom today, where he is superintendent of the city schools. Mr. Elwood, with about twenty others has donated his time and his services to the board of public affairs in order that he might have the opportunity to secure this special training in the work of inspection and investigation. Most of these who have given their time are specialists in some field and for the board to have engaged them or others of like quality and experience would have incurred a considerable expense to the state. For instance, F. L. Darrow of Brooklyn, who made a survey of the university classes in chemistry, is head of the science department of the Polytechnic at Brooklyn and has had sixteen years' experience in the teaching of chemistry. For several years he has followed the work of the bureau of municipal research and he came to Madison as one especially trained for making survey of the work of the chemistry classes. However, because he wanted to take further instruction in inspectional and investigation work under Dr. Allen, he came to Madison, donating his time and paying his own expenses.

Others who are working here under similar conditions are: H. L. Sutcliff, secretary, board of trustees, bureau of municipal research, Toronto, Canada; Royce Wright, with civil service commission, Minneapolis, Minn; Miss M. E. Leeds, Drexel Institute and Home School League, Philadelphia, Pa.; W. W. Theisen, Pierce, Nebr.; Miss E. A. Bush, Erastmus Hall High school, New York, Miss Abbie L. Day, instructor, department of education, University of Cincinnati, and inspector of city elementary schools, Cincinnati, Ohio; Calvin Thomason, assistant to the state superintendent of schools of Washington, in charge of rural social center work; Miss Grace Hettinger, teacher of English and German, high school, Iowa Falls, Ia.

The following who are connected with the normal schools or other educational institutions of the state have also participated in the survey as volunteers under the direction of Dr. Allen: Miss Helen Purcell, Mrs. Mary D.D Bradford, Miss Annie B. Kirch, Miss Emma Conley, Mrs. Rose C. Swart, W. C. Hewitt, F. E. Nurse, C. R. Rounds, H. L. Terry, H. W. Schmidt, James I. Malott, W. H. Sanders, R. W. Nimelich, W. S. Welles, W. S. Watson, L. M. Wilson, Miss Agnes Grady, Hugh J. Reber, B. M. Squeres, L. P. Bonezet, C. J. Brewer.

COMBINE ATTACK ON TWO FOREIGN PESTS

Two Unwelcome Immigrants, Gypsy Moth and Brown-tail Moth, Object of Attack by Experts.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8.—Two unbidden immigrants came into the United States some years ago; today, they are the combined attack of the federal and several state governments, which have turned to Europe and Asia for help in their fight. Not only have the two unwelcome visitors devastated vast vegetable tracts in this country, but one of them has originated and introduced a new human ailment that is doing great damage to the business of summer resorts. The two immigrants are the gypsy-moth and the brown-tail moth. The warfare being waged against them is described in a communication to the National Geographical Society at Washington, D. C., by Dr. L. O. Howard.

The gypsy-moth, according to the writer, was brought to this country for experimental purposes by a French professor of astronomy in a New England university. Its importation is about the only case of its kind on record. The brown-tail came to our shores in the normal course of commerce. From 1892 until 1900, both species were confined to Massachusetts, where a bitter fight was waged against them by the state. From 1900 to 1905, however, they were unmolested, except by individual property holders. Since 1905 Massachusetts has been joined in her fight by New Hampshire, Maine, Rhode Island and Connecticut, into which states the pests migrated. And now the United States government has stepped in to prevent the further spread over the face of the country.

Since the young of the moth prefer the leaves of certain trees for food, the states are removing these trees from the forests subject to the moth attack. In some cases, the problem may mean ultimate reforestation. The female gypsy-moth does not fly, but the species was spread when the insect, while in the caterpillar stage, crawled on trolley cars, automobiles and other vehicles, and upon the clothes of pedestrians. This condition was remedied by driving the pest from the highways for a distance of 50 to 100 feet. Enormous wire screens coated with a stick substance to entangle them, erected to the windward of infected woods, demonstrated the fact that many young caterpillars, suspended by their silken thread, were carried by the wind to a distance of six miles or more, and the attacking forces are now concentrating their efforts along the border of spread. As an added precaution to a spread of the pests, all products shipped from the infested region are rigidly inspected for the larvae of the insect. The female brown-tail moth is a strong flyer, but fortunately she is not so hard to control. Early spring and fall spraying and the cutting off and burning of the characteristic winter nests have brought wonderful results.

The principal money loss caused by the latter pest occurs at the summer resort, where the prevalence of what has come to be known as the "brown-tail rash" keeps people away. The hairs of the brown-tail caterpillar are finely barbed and brittle, and where they come in contact with the human skin these hairs enter the skin pores, break off, and cause a severe irritation. It is not always necessary for the caterpillar to come in contact with the skin for at certain times of the year the hairs are floating in the air.

The more recent recruits in the war against the moths are numerous species of true parasites, which have been imported from Europe and Asia. Chief among them is the Calosoma beetle, whose specialty is the devouring of leaf-eating caterpillars. Although slow to get a start, these beetles are now thriving in this country and are expected to exterminate millions of the moths during the present summer. Another recruit is the Japanese egg parasite, the Schedius kuvanae, which undergoes its entire development in a single gypsy-moth egg.

LIBERIAN NATIONAL DISH IS "DUMBOY"

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8.—Dumboy, the national dish of Liberia, is one of the world's gastronomic wonders; if allowed to stand long after being prepared for the table it becomes very hard, broken pieces of it being a favorite kind of shot for use in the long muzzle-loading guns of the natives. A casing of dumboy is also used to stiffen the leather sheaths of the native swords and knives, according to G. N. Collins, in a communication to the National Geographic Society at Washington, D. C.

"To attempt the description of some novel food is like attempting to describe a landscape," writes Mr. Collins. "The constituent parts may be described and the manner in which they are combined, but it requires something more than accurate description to reproduce the sensation of the original. The principal ingredient of dumboy is cassava, or 'cassada,' as it is called in Liberia. The edible roots of this plant are the source of tapioca and some forms of sago. To prepare the roots for dumboy they are peeled, boiled and all fibers from the center removed. The cooked roots are then placed in a large wooden mortar and beaten with a heavy pestle. This beating requires considerable skill and experience. In the hands of a novice the result is lumpy and inedible.

"The beating requires about three-quarters of an hour, and is hard work. As the beaten mass becomes homogeneous the pestle produces a loud crack each time it is drawn from the mortar. These sharp reports can be heard long distances through the forest, and are very welcome sounds at the end of a day's journey. When the dumboy reaches this stage the operator may rest without injury to the product; but, once the beating is carried past this point, it must be rapidly completed and the dumboy eaten at once. The natives say it is actually dangerous to eat dumboy that has stood for more than a few minutes after it is beaten.

"As soon as the beating is finished the dumboy is taken from the mortar and placed in shallow wooden bowls. The native method is to place the entire quantity in one large bowl from which all partakers eat. If divided, the customary portion for each person is a piece about the size and shape of an ordinary loaf of bread. A soup which has been prepared while the dumboy was being beaten is now poured into each bowl. There is a great variety in this soup, which imparts most of the taste to the dish. There is always a stock of some form of meat. This may be either chicken, deer, fish, monkey, or even canned beef. To this are added as many vegetables as can be obtained.

"As soon as the soup is added the dumboy is ready to be eaten; and, while the ingredients are somewhat bizarre, the method of eating the dish strikes the traveler as even more startling. The mass of dumboy, which can best be described as a sticky dough, will adhere instantly to anything dry, but is readily cut with a wooden spoon if the spoon is kept moist with soup. An incredibly large piece is cut off with the moistened spoon, taken up with a quantity of soup, and swallowed whole. No one thinks of chewing it, and it is customary to caution the novice by tales of the frightful operation necessary to separate the jaws once the teeth are buried in the sticky mass.

"As might be expected, few Europeans like dumboy on first acquaintance; and, with some, the initial distaste prevents further experiments. If a second or third attempt is made, however, and the dish has been properly prepared, the habit is usually formed, and before long every night spent in the bush without a meal of dumboy is counted a privation. Among the white residents of Liberia, fondness for this dish amounts almost to a cult. Is is regarded as a sort of guaranty that one's tenderfoot days are over."

MAYOR ISSUES HIS FAIR PROCLAMATION

CALLS ON CITIZENS GENERALLY TO MAKE THURSDAY NEXT A HALF HOLIDAY.

MANY EXHIBITS ARRIVE

Success of Initial Exhibit of Janesville Fair Now Seems Assured. —Many Working at Grounds.

Thursday next is Janesville day at the Janesville Fair. In view of this fact Mayor James A. Fathers has issued the following proclamation to the citizens general to make this day a half holiday. He says:

To the Citizens of Janesville:

With an earnest desire and concerted effort to make the Janesville Fair an unqualified success and to the end that "Janesville Day" may be a "record maker," I would therefore enjoin upon all merchants, manufacturers and citizens generally in making Thursday afternoon a "half holiday" by the cessation of usual business, in order that all may have an opportunity of attending the fair.

JAS. A. FATHERS, Mayor.

It is expected that Monday next the merchants of the city will be visited with a view of seeking their signatures to an agreement to close for the afternoon Thursday, so as to give all who wish an opportunity of attending the fair. This day has one of the best speed programs and the special entertainments arranged for will prove most entertaining to visitors.

Already the advent of many exhibitors has given the fair grounds the appearance of a genuine fair. Fine stock is arriving continually and the various exhibit halls are filling up. Strings of fast horses are reaching the city by every train, coming by express and in special cars, and the side show exhibitors are already plotting out their spaces and concession vendors making life miserable for the head of that department with their demands. It is going to be a big fair if present indications point to anything.

GIVEN HEAVY FINE FOR USING SETLINE

Nels Carlson Pays $30.16 for Operating Setline Above Four Mile Bridge.

One carp, caught on a setline, a small one at that, cost Nels Carlson of this city $30.16, a fine of twenty-five dollars and costs, for Carlson testified, when arraigned in the municipal court this morning, that all he had caught on his line above the four mile bridge was one small carp.

Early this morning William P. Mason, game warden, found Carlson baiting a one hundred fifty foot set line and Carlson was promptly arrested and taken before Judge Maxfield on the charge of violating the state game laws of fishing with over five hooks. Carlson said he did not know just how many hooks he had on the line but Game Warden Mason supplied the information, claiming there were something over twenty hooks on the line. Carlson declared fishing was "punk" for one German carp was all that he had been rewarded with since last Tuesday and he was fined twenty-five dollars and costs after he had pleaded guilty. The fine was paid.

NO PARCELS POST SENT TO GERMANY

Notice Is Given At Local Post Office. —Postage for Letters Is Changed.

Because of the war and the discontinuance of the German transatlantic steamship service notice has been given at the local postoffice that all parcel post mail will be discontinued to Germany. No parcels will be received for transmission until the routes are again established.

All letters to Germany and France must have a five cent stamp on them during the present war or they will be held up at New York until the required amount of postage is received there.

Many letters are now being held in New York for shortage in postage that will be delayed for two or three weeks in reaching their destination.

TURF MONARCHS ARE READY FOR CONTESTS

CLASSY HORSE FLESH WILL LINE UP FOR STARTER AT JANESVILLE FAIR.

BIG FIELDS ENTERED

Thirty-Seven Listed for 2:18 Pace, and Ten for 2:16 Trot.—Fast Ones in Free-For-All Pace.

By C. E. (Buck) Hunter.

Buck Hunter.

The big noise is here. It's what we have been waiting for so long, and it is safe to say that the classiest horses that ever lined up on the Janesville track will contend for honors next week at the big Janesville fair.

There has been a question in the minds of the members of the Park Association whether there would be stalls enough for all the horses that would be here, and there is still some doubt on the matter. People of Janesville and surrounding towns will wait a long time before they will be able to see such high class horses entered in the same meet.

The following review of the entries in the various events will be of interest to track fans just at this time.

In the 2:18 pace there are thirty-seven entries, which is a greater numbers of horses than at any meeting in this country, not barring the Grand Circuit, for it seems that all the horsemen in the country have shipped here for a little easy money. When they get through it will be just like getting money from home, and you know how hard that its. This is characteristic of the trotting horse game, however, for every time a horseman makes an entry at a meeting, no matter how small the meeting may be, he expects to have an easy time getting the money. That is what always makes the game good. In the 2:16 trot we will have at least ten starters, and among the entries will be Alice McGregor, Fred Harding and Red Band. These horses are home products owned in the state and near by Janesville and these three horses should give plenty of excitement, but you can never tell until after the last heat, as there is a strong probability that there might be one other in this race that will upset all calculations.

In the 2:30 trot with an entry of thirty-fourses horses, there will be another battle royal, and some of the drivers in this race will wish they had gone to Germany to fight instead of being here in this sort of a skirmish.

In the free-for-all pace there will be as classy a lot of pacers as ever faced a starter, and you will have to pay $100 to see the same bunch of horses start in the grand circuit, George Gano, 2:02, from the International 1:55 farm, Don Densmore, 2:02¼, Ella M., 2:04½, and Rob Roy, 2:05½. George Gano, Don Densmore and Rob Roy have been racing up through North Dakota for the past three weeks and as Don Densmore and Rob Roy have both defeated George Gano in their previous races it looks now like the Gano Horse would be about ready to take the measure of these two rivals, although Al Russell, the driver of Don Densmore, has all the confidence in the world in his horse at the present time and seems to think he will be able to go a mile in 2:06 or better next Wednesday. Of course Ella M. and Rob Roy will have to be considered in this race for this pair has always been very consistent in the racing game and there must not be any mistakes made with the others, for you will always find this pair knocking at the secretary's office door.

Several of the local horses will start during the week. Among them will be J. C. N. in the 2:18 pace. While this horse will be handicapped a trifle on account of his record, as last year he was compelled to take a mark of 2:22 which just lets him out of the slow class here. At any rate the manner he has been working of late this horse should show up well in the class in which he is entered. In the 2:30 trot Angus Axworthy will be given a chance to show what he can do. Angus has been taking very kindly to his work of late and has been going very steady at the trot.

In the three-year-old trot there are two entries from Janesville, John Huginin's John Burr, and John Souiman's Toddy Cochato. The two Johns will have quite a large following in this particular race as there have already been some speculations made. Electric Patch that took a time record a few weeks ago of 2:12, will be a starter also, and Fabrine, who took a breeder's record in his two-year-old form of 2:29½ will be another starter that will have our home-trained colts shaded a trifle for speed. But with this class of trotters it is always a hard proposition to guess them out, for there is always a chance for one of these colts to show a lot when you least expect it, (like Fiddler Joe).

In the two-year-old division of trotters, little can be said about speed as there is none entered here that has caused any great amount of notice, although when these babies parade in front of the grand stand you will be surprised to see what a classy bunch they are, and this class of trotters always attract a lot of attention.

In the three-year-old pace there is another class that you can't tell much about, as there are one or two in this race with which there goes a lot of reading matter and as yet it has not been sprung. Margaret Patch, by Dan Patch, 1:55, looks like she can fly, although her trainer tells me she has had very little work up to the present time as she met with an accident some time ago that caused him to let up on her. At present she is going good although no record breaking miles have been asked of her.

TWO GIRLS DROWNED AT BOAZ, WISCONSIN

Fourteen Year old Daughter of Oliver Grant Drowns With Companion Friday Afternoon.

A telegram received Friday afternoon at five o'clock brought the information of the death of Miss Lillian Grant, age fourteen years, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Grant of Janesville and Minnie Groh, age thirteen years, of Boaz Wisconsin, near Richland Center. No further information were received regarding the accident that cost the lives of the two young girls as it was impossible to reach the Groh family by phone or wire.

It is surmized that the two girls were drowned in a small creek which drains the Groh farm as both had often been wading in the stream which is very deep in many pools. Lillian Grant went with her friend Miss Freda Groh, who had been visiting the Grant family here, to Richland Center for a months visit on Thursday. The two families were intimate friends having resided on neighboring farms at Boaz before the Grants moved to Janesville. Mr. Grant left immediately for Richland Center after receiving the telegram and the remains of the little girl will be brought to Janesville this evening.

Funeral services have been planned to be held on Monday morning at the English Lutheran church and interment will be made in the Palmyra cemetery. The Grant girl is survived by her parents, two brothers, Curtis and Roy Grant and two sisters Leah and Mrs. Ethel Kaisermann, all of Janesville.

In the first half year three members of the Grant family have passed away and the death of the girl Friday is a severe blow to the family.

MANAGER MISSING; SO IS FIRM'S SUPPLIES

K. W. Talksdorf Former Manager of the Wear-U-Well Shoe Company Has Disappeared.

Writing a letter to the firm that controls the Wear-U-Well Shoe company of which he has the manager of their local store on West Milwaukee street, that he had gone to Canada and enclosing the key to the front door of the store K. W. Talksdorf left for parts unknown. F. T. Dexter one of the owners of the company, with headquarters in Minneapolis, arrived in the city today to investigate matters and finds that some $615 in cash has also taken wings with the departed manager. The matter will be put in the hands of the local police and as the company is protected by a bonding company it is probable the missing manager will be located. Meanwhile A. D. Foster of this city has assumed the management of the shoe store and it will continue in business.

JANESVILLE CAPITAL AIDS IN ORGANIZING A BIG LUMBER FIRM

Madison and Janesville Men Organize $1,700,000 Corporation to Develop Oregon Timber Tract.

Several Janesville business men are prominently connected with the recent organization of a $1,700,000 lumber company with large holdings in Oregon, the development of which is contemplated in the near future under favorable conditions.

The new corporation is known as the Pendleton Lumber company, with combination of the Gilkey Timber Company of Janesville and the Stondall Land and Timber Company of Madison. The two concerns held two large adjoining timber areas in Oregon which are now consolidated into a tract of 8,500 acres, which will yield it is estimated 800,000,000 feet of fir and spruce.

The officers of the company are: James S. Fifield of Janesville, president; George E. King of Janesville, vice-president and assistant treasurer; A. M. Stondall of Madison, vice president; F. R. Pendleton of Oregon, secreary and general manager; Al T. Rogers of Madison, assistant secretary and treasurer.

The new company is organized under the Wisconsin laws, articles of incorporation having been filed with the secretary of state.

CONVENTION OF YOUNG PEOPLE IN THIS CITY

Lutheran Young People's Societies to Meet at St. John's Church Tomorrow.

The annual convention of the German Lutheran Young People's Societies of the southern Wisconsin district of the synod of Iowa, will be held in the St. John's German Lutheran church on Sunday and Monday. Between one hundred and fifty and two hundred guests from the surrounding cities of Madison, Watertown, Johnson's Creek, Verona and Beloit will be in attendance. The convention this year is the sixth annual meeting of these organizations which has been held.

Extensive preparations for the entertainment of the delegates have been completed by the local society. The reception will occur this evening in the church parlors on North Bluff street.

The chief services will occur tomorrow morning when Rev. H. Hartig will deliver the sermon. The evening services will be held in the English language and the sermon will be delivered by Rev. J. Becker of Fond du Lac. The annual business meeting will occur in the afternoon.

On Monday the delegates will be the guests of the local society at a picnic at Crystal Springs.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

POLITE THOUGH MARRIED.

A LETTER friend who has been married about a quarter of a century makes the following valuable contribution on the eternal problem on how to be happy though married:

"My husband and I have had a very happy married life due to several things beside our real congeniality. One is that we try to be as polite to each other as though we were not married. And that means a lot. We may lose our tempers but we try to remember that the spoken word is not easily forgotten."

The other factors in this successful marriage were also worth notice but I am not going to mention them today because I want to spend all my force in hammering that one in, "We try to be as polite to each other as though we were not married."

RUTH CAMERON

I wonder how many married people can say that of their daily intercourse.

I wonder how many divorced couples would not be divorced if they had made that effort.

The habit of politeness or courtesy—I like that word better—is almost universally formed in courtship; the two parties put a guard on their tongues. Each tries to say nothing that will wound the other and everything that will please. Then comes marriage with its inevitable intimacies, frictions and disillusionments. Now is the time when we need that beautiful habit of courtesy the most. But, by the same token, this is the very time when it fails us. The guard slips, we say some sharp little thing which brings as sharp an answer; some little fault irritates us and we characterize it with unflattering frankness; so it goes bit by bit, until some day we find that we are no longer making any effort to be courteous to each other.

I once knew a young married couple who made this painful discovery on the eve of their third anniversary. Being unusually analytical young people they faced the situation bravely and as an anniversary gift to each other, better than jewels or flowers, each pledged the other a renewed effort to be just as courteous as in the days of courtship.

To be sure, we do not half mean most of the sharp little things that we say, but the impulsive, thoughtless word will often leave a wound that will fester and ache at intervals, perhaps for years. As my letter friend says, the spoken word is not easily forgotten. You may think an unkind thing, cool down, be ashamed of your thought, and have done no harm. But once put that thought into words and you cannot measure the harm it may do. Give a lie an hour's headstart and it will take the truth a hundred years to catch up with it, is a familiar saying, and the same is often true of a sharp word and its retraction. "Of the unspoken word thou art master, but the spoken word is master of thee."

"Th pain of an ungratified desire," says Schopenhaeur, "is small compared with that of repentance—for the former has to face the immeasurable open future: the latter the past, which is closed irrevocably."

Suppose we try to remember this when we struggle with the desire to say some sharp and unkind word.

Heart and Home Problems

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am 20 years old, have been raised on the farm and have never been away from home for over a week at a time. Don't you think I could go to town to work and live a clean life? I have been reared very carefully. I should be at work, as I will soon have to support myself, and I am afraid to go to work for fear of not doing right. I have never been among people except country ones, and am afraid when I go to work in town that I will meet people who will lead me wrong. Will you please tell me what you think of it?

(2) Do you think it wrong to attend private dances? I have been to four private ones in the country and would like to know if you think it wrong.

(3) Are members of the Presbyterian Church allowed to attend private dances?

(4) I am five feet five inches tall, have medium brown hair, light blue eyes, fair complexion. What colors should I wear?

(5) I weigh 110 pounds. Am I to slender? A READER.

(1) You can live just as clean and upright a life in town as on the farm, my dear. You know what is right and wrong, and it depends entierly upon yourself and not upon others what you make of yourself. When you know that God is always near you, loving and protecting you, you are not very apt to do what He would not approve of.

(2) I have never disapproved of respectable private dances.

(3) Strict Presbyterians do not approve of dancing, I belive, though I know many Presbyterians who dance.

(4) I should think you could wear any delicate color very well. Brown to match your hair and blue to match your eyes should prove becoming.

(5) You are just about right.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am 19 years old. I am working out. I am going with a fellow who is 25 years of age. Is he too old?

(2) Is it wrong for him to stay until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning?

(3) Is it wrong to kiss a fellow good-night if you are not engaged to him? Why?

(4) Is it wrong to chew gum out in company? BESSIE.

(1) No.

(2) I don't think it is very decent, my dear. Neither of you can be fit for much the next day. (3) A man will kiss any girl who gives him a chance, and he is built so that he can kiss and still have no respect for the girl, because she lets him kiss her. So a girl simply makes herself cheap if she lets a man kiss her unless they are engaged to be married, when he has a right to kiss her to a reasonable amount. Men seldom care to marry girls that they think have been kissed and pawed over by all the other men.

(4) It is not good manners.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a girl of 18 and engaged to a young man ten years older than I am. Is he too old for me? (2) When he calls in the evening, do you think it proper for us to go for a short buggy ride, as long as we behave ourselves? INQUISITIVE.

(1) If your tastes are congenial he is not too old for you.

(2) Since you are engaged and know how to behave yourselves, a buggy ride ought to be all right. I hope you will be very happy, my dear.

Mildewed Clothing

By Miss Annabell Turner, instructor in home economics, University of Wisconsin extension division.

Mildew in clothing is difficult of removal. Soaking the spots in some acid, as lemon juice, vinegar or buttermilk and salt and then exposing them to direct sunlight is a good treatment. Or they may be wet with a paste of soft soap and pulverized soft chalk and exposed to sunlight. If the stains do not yield to these methods javelle water may be tried.

To make javelle water take 1 pound washing soda, ½ pound bleaching powder (calcium hypochlorite), 1 quart boiling water, and 2 quarts cold water. Dissolve the soda in boiling water in a granite pan and let it cool. Dissolve the bleaching powder in cold water, let it settle and pour the clear liquid into the soda; let settle. Pour off the clear liquid, bottle and put away in a dark place. This gives a 25% solution. Mixed with equal portions of water it may be used cautiously to remove spots. If the materials are to remain in the solution for some time it should be diluted to about a 2% solution. Wash thoroughly in several waters and lastly in diluted ammonia water.

Alcohol is perhaps the best solvent for grass stains.

Fruit stains are held in the material by pectin, a gelatinous substance soluble only in boiling water. Pouring boiling water from a height through such fabrics will remove such stains.

To remove iron rust from white goods wet the stained part with borax and water or ammonia and spread over a bowl of boiling water. Apply a ten per cent solution of hydrochloric acid (muriatic) drp by drop until the stain brightens. Dip at once into water. If the stain does not disappear repeat the process. After removing the stain rinse well with ammonia to neutralize any acid that may remain.

Oxalic acid may be used for iron rust in the same way. It is not so detrimental to the fabric but is a deadly poison.

If ink stains are fresh they may be soaked in milk. Use more milk as the old becomes discolored.

Commercial ink eradicators are most effective as a rule. The removal is accomplished quickly and with little detriment to the material if carefully used and thoroughly rinsed after using.

Every Day Talks To Everday People.

(BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.)

A young man of twenty-four years was driving slowly down a flower-flanked country lane that led to a substantial farmhouse. This particular house did not differ much from many of its neighbors, except that it was the home of the parents of Elizabeth Blank. She was a young girl of twenty, and by her winsome face and good cooking she had found favor in the eyes of the young man, who had made up his mind to ask her this day if she would say "Yes."

True, he had not showered favors upon her, neither had he paid her much attention, but he consoled himself with the thought that he had not showed any girl much attention. In fact, up to this time, the young gallant would prefer the company of another young man, a ball game, or a horse race to "mooning" around with any silly girl. You see he was immune from little D. C.'s shafts, but last night as he had sat at supper at the barn dance held at one of his father's neighbors and tested the biscuits and cake that this young lady had donated toward the picnic supper, he had suddenly turned a corner of his life and came face to face with the idea that he wanted a wife—a wife who could make biscuits and cake like Elizabeth could.

He drew rein at her father's side gate and called her out. It was early afternoon and she was just finishing the dinner dishes. She had on a checked gingham apron that covered her dress completely and her sleeves were rolled up far above the elbow. Her soft brown hair was, to his way of saying it, "done-up" low and her serious gray eyes looked their wonderment as she came smilingly out on the sun checkered porch. Ah! had she known the honor that awaited her. How well it is that we cannot lift the curtain of the future. Had she known she would in all probability acted shy and ill at ease. She might have ventured to say "This is so sudden." But all this was spared the reader and she.

He looked around. At a nearby window sat her mother, busily engaged at the sewing machine. He liked an industrious woman, but he did wish her mother was farther removed from the scene of action. "I called," he said. To save his neck he could not keep the blood from mounting to his temples. A silence ensued. "Yes?" she smiled. "I want to ask y ou—" Another pause. The sewing machine buzzed industriously. A lazy bee droned by. "Yes?" the girl repeated, frank wonderment in her eyes. The blood was drumming in his temples. Up to now he had never known real embarrassment. This was the genuine article. He sincerely wished he was home—anywhere out of the range of the seriously curious eyes of the girl on the porch; the girl who suddenly became the most to be desired possession in all the world.

The sewing machine stopped. Don't let your cake burn, Elizabeth," called her mother. And then again, "I want you to try on this waist in about ten minutes, please." She smiled at him and the boy noticed that she had a dimple. He wished she might smile again.

"I must go in," she said kindly.

"I—I must go on," he said slowly.

It is not all fun, being a boy, is it

HUED SWEATER COATS POPULAR FOR WEAR

Fascinating New Sweaters Proving Popular With "Weaker Sex" For Outing Wear

(By Margaret Mason.)

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Aug. 8.—Sweater was an all right name for the erstwhile bulky, all-wool article the color of a fireman's shirt, or a blue funk when affected by college athletes or an uncompromising drab when worn by poor, but honest, and anaemic maiden ladies. The dainty silken garments of hectic hue now sported by the untoiling lillies of the moneyed smart set is as much entitled to shed its sordid and unesthetic name as the butterfly which doesn't even have "nee grub" on its visiting cards.

Nothing lovelier, more appropriate nor more comfortable for wear over a white frock or with a white waist and skirt can be found at the summer resorts this season. The colors are so vividly ardent as to recall the undyeing of ancient Tyrian dyers. The Duchess of Marlborough must have a different sweater for each day in the week, according to the busy little Newport correspondents, for every society note quotes her in a different tinted sweater coat. Perchance she owns some of the chameleon variety, for some of these exquisite silken affairs are knitted with a background of one shade of silk, and the rib of a contrasting color. The effect of the two tones changing with each turn of the wearer rivals the opal or the cockatoo for variety.

Some of the fascinating new sweaters are cut on Norfolk lines with wide belts of the same texture, while others have sashes with deep fringes. Many show a long unbroken line from shoulder to knee, but all of the best models show a low V-shaped neck with a rolling white collar of organdie.

Appropos of the collar subject, the really smart flare collar for your frocks from now on, or off, must have a bias edging of black, old blue, or some dark contrasting tone that will carry out the color scheme of your gown.

To wear an all white organdie collar any more stamps you immediately as behind the fashionable times. Some of the new color-bound collars have the edging of black braid, while a tiny bias fold of the desired color batiste finishes the others.

Since there are sweaters and sweaters, and not the least of these the human species (although it may be an inelegant to mention it), it seems not amiss to treat for a paragraph or two of the very newest dress shields. Owing to the transparent mode of dressing, it was up to some one to invent a less visible form of this unsightly summer necessity.

The ever-ingenious French have obliged with a close fitting shield of flesh-tinted, silk-covered rubber, guaranteed to escape the closes observation, even under the single thickness, or thinness of chiffon, which is now by curtesy and custom dubbed a blouse. Though these new dress shields are flesh-tinted they are by no means a skin. They are well worth the rather fancy price which attaches to them as an imported and as yet exclusive creation.

For the more fastidious of the feminine fair ones, the shields come scented with the wearer's own individual perfume. And indeed, a distinctive and personal perfume is as essential a part of the well-dressed woman today as are her made-to-order stays. She either chooses her favorite odor and has it carried out in her sachet, her bath crystals, powders, perfumes and soaps, or she hikes her to a perfume specialist and puts herself in that gifted and costly individual's hands to be fitted out with a subtle scent perfectly attuned to her type or personality. This being accomplished according to the expert's satisfaction and a good sized check, the personally perfumed person has her house and her clothes all gone over to match and is henceforth always in good odor. For all frank, open, wholesome natures, clean, pungent scents like carnation violet and mignonette are proper. The voluptious charmers are strong for seductive Oriental odors like the langorous tube-rose locust, gardenia fragrances, while the sweet girlish innocents are saturated with the sacherine scents of the rose, lily of the valley and lilac.

If this sort of thing keeps up even a blind man soon can put the feminine passerby down in her own proper tempermental category.

Famous Rugs of Persia.

The art of rug making has been perfected in Persia as in no other country. It takes from two months to five years to complete a rug, and there are some that date back twelve centuries. In the White House there is a Persian rug which is valued at $50,000.

PROTECT YOUR COMPLEXION

Every woman who spends the Summer at the seashore, in the mountains or at some fashionable watering place should take with her a few bottles of

GOURAUD'S ORIENTAL CREAM

to improve and beautify her complexion and protect her skin from the burning sun, bleaching winds, and damp night air.

The surest guarantee of its perfection is the fact of it having been in actual use for nearly three-quarters of a century.

It cannot be surpassed for the relief of tan, pimples, freckles and other blemishes of the complexion.

XL I.

Cheer Up, Miss Clarke! Peggy I s Handing Mr. Kelly Back to You.

Peggy has discovered the favors she has shown Mr. Kelly have worked a greater sorrow for Miss Clarke than she had ever meant. Though just a little unkind, of course, her first plans were innocent enough and it must not be thought that she would have conceived the scheme had she thought that it would have such consequences.

The one perplexing development, and a very unforeseen one, it is true, seems to be the liking Peggy has acquired for Mr. Kelly. She does not in any sense "care" for him. But just the same he diverts her and she has a relish for his little pleasantries.

It was after returning from a lunch with Mr. Kelly that Peggy came upon Miss Clarke, lingering woman-like on the verge of tears. Mr. Kelly, fortunately, was not present at the time. Peggy, with swift feminine understanding, took things in at once. That she should be the cause of such pain in a sister hurt and dismayed her. She little thought that it meant so much to Miss Clarke as this.

It does not occupy Peggy long to hit upon a means of smoothing the matter. She feels that she wants to rush to the sorrowing lady, pour out the whole story of her mean little scheming and ask forgiveness. But, reflecting, she sees that this would be useless. Miss Clarke would only deny that Peggy was in any way the accesory to her sorrow.

Moved however, by a warmth of feeling that she cannot suppress, Peggy, hitherto unobserved, steps behind Miss Clarke's chair and for a moment rests a sympathetic hand on her shoulder. But she says nothing and putting fresh water in the vase of flowers on the desk she turns to her own work.

And now Peggy sets her wits to the forming of a plan that will permit her to withdraw from things with as good grace as possible. Thoroughly vexed at her own behavior, she is determined to deal out her own punishment.

Mr. Kelly is later dismayed to see the frigidity Peggy showers upon him. Approaching her with a genial sally, he is suddenly and heartlessly rebuffed. He goes to Miss Clarke complaining.

"Isn't she the whimiscal party, though?" says Mr. Kelly.

"Oh, I think she's as sweet as she can be."

And when Peggy and Miss Clarke leave that evening arm in arm, Mr. Kelly looks after and marvels.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

When you wish to bake large potatoes hurriedly, place in boiling water and allow them to boil until tender. Wipe dry and place in the oven.

To cleanse and restore white enamel furniture that has become soiled or discolored, treat it thus: Melt one tablespoonful of bicarbonate of soda in one quart of boiling water. When cool wash the furniture with the solution, using an old flannel cloth for the purpose.

If a lemon is warmed before squeezing, nearly double the quantity of juice will be obtained.

Scratches on furniture will disappear if rubbed well with a solution of equal parts of linseed oil and turpentine. Rub this well into the scratches and then polish with a soft cloth.

THE TABLE.

Italian Salad—Butter an oval mold slightly, then arrange cooked macaroni and truffles around the sides; now grate six cucumbers; add to half a pint of water, with a slice of onion; simmer for five minutes; remove the onion and add one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of white pepper, one tablespoonful of gelatin moistened in a little water, two tablespoonfuls of white vinegar. Pour into the bowl and add finely-chopped chicken, celery, green peppers and stewed tomatoes. Set on ice until cold. Turn out on a decorated platter, garnish with mayonnaise and parsley.

Boiled Icing—Beat the white of one egg, one teaspoonful of water and pinch of salt to stiff froth, then beat into a stiff froth, then beat into same two teaspoonfuls of sugar. To one cup of sugar add water enough to make it run and boil until it will spin a hair. Pour this into the white of egg and beat until ready to put on cake. The sugar beaten into the white of egg keeps the icing soft as long as the cake lasts.

Poor Man's Sugar Cookies—One cup sugar one cup sour milk or buttermilk, half cup lard, half teaspoonful each salt and soda, one teaspoonful vanilla; proceed with flour and directions as in foregoing recipe. These cookies are really delicious and may be varied by using different flavorings, caraway seeds, cocoanut or raisins. Roll thin, as they rise up thick.

USE WIRELESS SYSTEM IN LONDON TO DELIVER TOBACCO WITH MOTORS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, August 8.—Motor delivery vans of one of London's largest tobacco firms have been equipped with wireless apparatus in order that help may be rushed to needy smokers on the receipts of the signal S. O. S.—meaning, "Send on Smokes."

This firm claims to be the only one in the world using the wireless in its delivery system. The firm communicates through a station on the roof of the building. Aerials are placed on the vans, manipulated by an operator inside.

As a time saver, the wireless is said by the firm to more than save its cost. Very few messages are missed because of atmospheric disturbances.

In instances of its usefulness, one of the wealthy West-End clubs ran out of tobacco supplies at 5:40 in the afternoon, within twenty minutes of closing time for the firm. The S. O. S. signal flashed from the roof on receipt of the order. At one minute to six, the motor van, after a mad race up the street, threw on its brakes in front of the club. The wireless, therefore, not only saved a large order, but relieved the clubmen from distress.

MAJORITY OF WOMEN'S COMPLAINTS OF THEFTS PROVE FICTITIOUS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, August 8.—More than half of the complaints by women of having been held up and robbed are fictitious according to criminal statistics Berlin courts. This has been out in a typical case just A young woman, after a quarrel with her lover, was found, her clothing torn and her hair disarranged, lying in the edge of one of the small lakes in the Grunewald, a wooded tract west of Berlin. She said she had been assaulted, robbed and thrown into the lake, and gave a description of her assailant which fitted her lover. The man was arrested, whereupon it transpired that he was not near the Grunewald at the time of the alleged assault. The woman finally confessed that she had torn her own clothing and jumped into the water. She was sentenced to two months' imprisonment as an example to the numerous other offenders of this type.

PARLIAMENT IN SESSION ON DEFENSE QUESTION

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Stockholm, August 8.—National defense problems are keeping parliament in session during the summer, because Conservatives, Liberals and Socialists are unable to unite on a solution.

The Socialists desire a decrease in the present cost of maintaining the defense. Conservatives and Liberals argue for a larger appropriation, but they are split on the navy program. The Conservatives want dreadnaughts and the Liberals a navy of lighter craft vessels, especially against the building of any more warships at all.

Another cause of wrangling is the proposed increase in the training period of conscripts. The Conservatives are firm for extending the eight months period to one year, while the Liberals will not concede more than nine months and ten days.

GERMAN AVIATORS ARE TRAINED FOR CONFLICT.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, August 8.—German aviation circles are expressing pride in the part played by their countrymen, in record-making in the last few months. All the records were made in German aeroplanes equipped with German motors. The duration record has been bettered four times this year by Germans. The first was Bruno Langer, who set the mark at 14 hours and seven minutes on February 3. This mark was raised to 16 hours and 26 minutes on April 26th by the Frenchman Poullet, but on June 24th Basserman bettered this figure, four days later Landman raised it once more, and then came Boehm with the first 24-hour flight ever made. Boehm still had gasoline enough for two hours' flying and was comparatively fresh when he landed. But for an approaching storm he would have stayed up another half hour.

DISCOVER OPIUM DENS IN LONDON CHINATOWN INHABITED BY SAILORS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, August 8.—Raids on the opium dens in London's Chinatown, a district near the docks, have thrown new light on this sordid quarter, which was little known until nineteen Chinese were brought to answer recently in the police court. The place is a mass of opium dens and gambling houses, where the Chinese sailors off the oriental ships in port have been robbed of their earnings. There are about 800 of these sailors and cabin boys in port at a time.

Charitable societies are now organizing a fund to build in this district a hotel, social club and institute, with classes in English and seamanship. Arrangements will also be made by which the sailors may send home part of their earnings. The name of the new organization is the Chinese Service Guild.

MOSQUITOES AND WAR BOTHER PARIS PEOPLE

Paris, August 8.—The fashionable quarters of Paris and sections of the suburbs are suffering this summer from a plague of mosquitoes. The source of this unprecedented annoyance is a profound mystery, although the city authorities have been making great efforts to discover the breeding places.

PARIS COURT ORDERS SEVERAL NAPOLEONIC RELICS FOR MUSEUM

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, August 8.—Some interesting Napoleonic relics have been placed, by order of the Paris courts, in the keeping of the Caranvalet Museum. They consist of a sword given by Napoleon to General Rapp bearing the inscription, "Napoleon General to Colonel Marmier," the dagger snatched by General Rapp from the students Knapps at Schoenbrunn, when the latter attempted to assassinate Napoleon, and a sword of honor bearing the inscription "To Governor General Rapp with thanks from the city of Dantzig, 1808." These relics were deposited by their owner in the hands of a woman who had undertaken to sell them. As they were neither sold nor returned, however, the matter came before the Tribunal, which decided that they should be placed in the Carnavalet Museum pending judgment.

MANY CONVENTIONS WILL BE HELD AT WINNIPEG

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Winnipeg, August 7.—With the schedule of many conventions for August and September and the closing of the national convention of the supreme lodge of the Knights of Pythias, in session here from July 31 to August 11, Winnipeg today is looking upon as a convention city of the Northwest. On August 11 to 13, the national convention of the bread and cake manufacturers of Canada meets in Winnipeg. H. E. Trout secretary at Ontario, says that the indications given by the number of special trains and large delegations expected from the east and Ontario, would suggest a big crowd.

The Canadian Pharmaceutical convention will open its sessions in this city August 29, to last for seven days. Through C. W. Campbell, local secretary of the convention 7,500 booklets of the sights of Winnipeg along with special invitations to many have been forwarded. September will be started with the big convention of the Maintenance of the way employees of America, from September 3 to 12. More than 500 delegates are expected and these with their families and friends will bring 1,500 here. The Lumbermen's Hoo Hoo convention is expected to be one of the largest of the season. Elaborate arrangements are being made for the entertainment of 1,500 delegates with their friends and families. From September 24 to 27, the annual convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrews will be held here.

AMERICAN PAINTERS LACK "NATIONALISM" SAY BRITISH CRITICS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, August 8.—American painters lack nationalism; they are content to imitate the French; their one ideal is prettiness and often prettiness without meaning, according to some of the criticism passed by British experts on a large and representative collection of American art which has been on view in a gallery here. The one thing they find to praise is what one critic terms the "high level of technical excellence."

Eliminating a half dozen paintings of cowboy scenes, prairies and skyscrapers, this critic declares "the rest might well be an exhibition of French pictures, and those better by far than may be found in the Beaux Arts. Nor is there any individual development of French impulses. The roots of American art are not fixed in its own soil, but in Montparnasse."

LOBSTER'S HAPPY DEATH IS BOILING OVER SLOW FIRE, CLAIMS EXPERTS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, August 8.—Boiling over a slow fire is the happiest death a lobster can meet, so it has been determined at the Jersey Marine Biological Station. The experiments were carried out by Joseph Sinel, a well-known biologist, for the Jersey Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, whose members associated the prevalent method of killing lobsters with medieval torture.

Lobsters, says Mr. Sinel, are extremely difficult to kill. Piercing the brain does not seem to cause the lobster more than temporary annoyance, since his brain is a mere nerve ganglion the size of a hempseed. He has to be killed all over. To throw him into boiling water fails to do the work either mercifully or quickly, since he struggles violently to escape for about two minutes.

The pleasantest way to end a lobster's troubles, Mr. Sinel finds, is the old fashioned way of placing him in cold water and bringing him to a boil. As the water warms, he becomes merely lazy and rolls over as for a sleep. By the time the water reaches the comparatively mild temperature of 70 degrees, Fahrenheit, he becomes comatose. At 80 degrees, he is dead. To use a human illustration, the biologist says it is like a person succumbing to a heat wave, with loss of consciousness and a painless end.

LATE FAD OF PARIS SOCIETY IS HAVING READINGS OF TONGUE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, August 8.—The latest fad among fashionable Parisians is having the tongue read. "Glossomancy," as the new science is styled, is akin to Chiromancy and Graphology, and consists in having the character told by the shape and dimension of the tongue. A long tongue shows frankness, a short one, dissimulation; a broad one, unreservedness; a narrow one, concentration. When the tongue is long and broad, it is asign that its owner is inclinet to gossiping; when it is long and narrow, that he is moderately frank and open. Those who possess a short and broad tongue are untruthful, and people should be careful of those whose tongue is short and narrow, for they are sly as well as bad tempered. The new science makes sticking out the tongue not only bad mannered but dangerous.

TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND SPENT BY AMERICANS FOR SWISS EMBROIDERY

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

St. Gall, Switzerland, Aug. 8.—The exports of Swiss embroidery to the United States were less last June by about $200,000 than during June 1913. This enormous reduction is attributed to what are called inquisitorial methods of which France is now complaining. Swiss firms refuse to show their books to the American commission which was sent to Switzerland by the Treasury Department in Washington a few months ago. Therefore, it is affirmed here that unreasonably high valuations are placed upon Swiss embroideries entering New York.

GERMANY CONFIDENT OF VICTORY IN WARS WAS FULLY PREPARED

JOHN GOLLNER WRITES FROM STUTTGART, GERMANY, ON EVE OF GREAT CONFLICT.

ENTHUSIASM RAMPANT

Word Direct From Heart of Great Empire That Is Now Shut Off By Cables From News Centers.

In a letter received by George S. Parker from John Gollner, who is now living at Stuttgart, Germany, dated July 28th, the very date of the declaration of war by Austria on Servia, some interesting facts are recounted as to the enthusiasm shown by the Germans and the eagerness with which they welcomed the present war which is shaking Europe to its very foundations.

Mr. Gollner was for many years a resident of Janesville, connected with the Parker Pen Company. He is a member of the Masonic order, of the local lodge of Elks, and just previous to his leaving the United States was treasurer of one of the most successful Fourth of July celebrations ever held in the city.

He was a Servian refugee, being forced to flee that country many years ago while engaged in the newspaper business owing to an attack made upon the late King Alexander and Queen Draga, who were later assassinated by army officers. His property was confiscated and for some years his wife was forced to remain in Servia until Mr. Gollner became established in business in this country.

He returned to Europe several years ago and is in business in Stuttgart. It would be expected that his sentiments would be with Servia in the present struggle, but according to his letter he showed little sympathy for them in their present dispute with Austria.

In view of the happenings since the letter was written, the prognostications are somewhat at fault, but it shows how the Germans looked at the whole affair and is extremely interesting from this point of view. Since the letter was written the following events have taken place which had not been dreamed of by Germany at that time:

July 28—Austria declared war on Servia.

Aug. 1—Germany declared war on Russia.

Aug. 4—Germany declared war on Belgium.

Aug. 4—Germany declared war on France.

Aug. 4—Germany and England declareed war on each other.

Aug. 4—Invasion of Belgium by Germans begun; advance stubbornly resisted by Belgian troops.

Aug. 6—Austria declared war on Russia.

Aug. 6—English and German fleets battle in North Sea.

Aug. 7—England mobilizes its forces and French army goes to support of Belgium.

Mr. Gollner writes as follows:

Stuttgart, Germany, July 23, 1914.

Since Saturday everybody is excited and talks war; streets crowded day and night. Bands, songs, patriotic music, speeches, etc. Every man is cleaning his uniform and ready to march at a moment's notice. Thousands of Austrians left for service at home. Never in the world's history was a nation better prepared for war than Germany is today.

It's time to clear the situation, the sooner the better! If Russia and France dare to march (I doubt it), they will be beaten so terribly that for fifty years at least not one there will talk war.

The united armies of Germany and Austria are not afraid of the rest of Europe!

England will remain neutral, as ever, and take a nice island somewhere as soon as there is a chance to enough at home.

Russia has a strike of some million men and a revolution on its hands as soon as their soldiers march out.

Italy will and must join Austria.

Servia deserves a hard licking—a good lesson. It's necessary to show them that the Russian uncle is not almighty.

The men here and all over Germany cannot wait for the mobilization order! All want to go, to decide the European questions once and forever. Such enthusiasm is wonderful. God knows how it will come out; war is a terrible thing, but there are differences and always will be which cannot be settled any other way.

Business is continuing, of course, but nobody buys more than is necessary for a short time.

I was, am and will always remain an optimist. War, as bad as it is, often is a blessing for some countries and so it will be now for Germany and Austria.

Thousand million marks, hard coin, paid by the Frenchmen in 1870, is still in the tower at Spandau, near Berlin, and 400 more millions of the kind at the treasury in Berlin.

My wife's brother and brother-in-law are soldiers in the Austrian army. War news now and nothing else.

LARGE SNAKE IS FOUND BY WORKMEN THIS MORNING

A large yellow snake about four feet in length was found in the grass near the intersection of Academy street and Milwaukee street about six thirty this morning by several workmen, who immediately proceeded to end its life with clubs, stones and sticks. A call was also sent to the police and Officer Albright hurried to the rescue. His services, however, were not needed, as the reptile had breathed its last when he arrived. It is thought that the snake had escaped from some charmers who are staying in the vicinity to attend the fair.

FOOTVILLE LUCKILY WIN LEAGUE TITLE

Defeated Milton Junction Nine at Latter Place Yesterday by 7 to 6 Score.

Footville county baseball nine are champions of the Y. M. C. A. county diamond league. Yesterday, playing the Milton Junction team at the latter place, they won a luckily played battle by the score of 7 to 6, thus claiming a clear hold on first place, and the beautiful 4 by 6 foot pennant which will be warded at the coming Evansville fair.

West pitched better ball than did Lentz of Footville. In fact, Milton Junction were declared the winners up until the last few innings. It was a hard-fought contest. Roberts was Footville's backstop, while Caroll did the catching for the Junction team. Rev. Schroeder of Footville acted as umpire.

Question: How may oats be prevented from lodging?

Answer: Attempts have been made by breeders of grain to produce oats with stems stiff enough to resist wind and rain, but these attempts have not yet proven successful to any great degree. The best way to secure oats that will not lodge is to avoid sowing on ground recently manured.

Question: What is the cause of blight on potatoes?

Answer: Blight on potatoes in Wisconsin is not caused by weather conditions as is commonly supposed, but is a fungus plant (alternaria solani), which like some other plants grow best in hot moist weather, which accounts for the fact that so many suppose such weather to be the cause of the blight. The fact is that the little fungus plants lie dormant upon the leaves waiting for favorable conditions in which to develop. This little plant can only be seen through the microscope. The effects are quite familiar to potato growers, but the black spots on the leaves are not the plant but the evidence of destroyed tissue, resulting from the breaking down of the plant cells by the parasitic fungus plant. This fungus plant on the potato vine is as dependent upon the weather conditions and food supply as other plants are.

As the decaying of the vines occurs only after the blight or fungus plant has done its work of destruction, it will be seen that to wait for the appearance of these black spots before applying the remedy will be futile. The remedy is the familiar one, Bordeau mixture, which should be applied three or four times at intervals of about two weeks during the last half of summer.

The formula for Bordeau mixture has been given several times in these columns.

CHAPIN DESCRIBES JAPANESE FUNERAL

Interesting Account of Modes of Burying Dead Given in Communication.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8.—The oddities of a Japanese funeral are described in a communication to the National Geographic Society at Washington, D. C., by William W. Chapin, who has extensively explored the far east.

"First came four men, each carrying a flimsy artificial tree, about three feet long, representing the lotus plant in bloom," he writes. "These were followed by eight coolies bearing on their shoulders two poles about 18 feet long, from which hung the coffin. When the family of the deceased is unable to bear the expense of a full-length coffin, a smaller square one is used, the remains being placed in a sitting posture. These receptacls are sometimes too small to receive the remains without breaking the limbs.

"In the present case, owing to the affluent circumstances of the deceased, the coffin was of full length, its frail construction in the style of a toy Swiss cottage. The two sides were hung with bamboo curtains of so loose a weave as to show plainly the outline of the occupant, who proved to be a woman. The remains were followed by rikishas containing the mourners and friends. On reaching the auditorium of a near-by Buddhist temple, the poles from which the coffin hung extended so far into the entrance that it was difficult to gain admittance. The alters in these temples occupy so much of the room that little is left for the people. Spaces were assigned us on the floor at the right, where we could sit. In front of each one stood a tray with cigarettes and a small brazier, containing a live coal to furnish light for the smoker.

"The mourners were kneeling on the floor at the left. Just back of the altar enclosure stood a low stand; behind this sat the high priest, a large gong at his right, and just back of him sat two other priests with a pair of cymbals. The service consisted of prayers repeated first by one and then another, then all three in unison, with occasional readings from scrolls, all interspersed with strokes on the gong and clangs of the cymbals. During the service the bereaved husband passed to the front of each group of friends, including our party, knelt facing each group, and bowed to the floor. This salutation was returned by all in a similar manner, as an expression of regard and sympathy.

"Toward the close of the service an attendant entered, bearing an armful of paper boxes about the size of a pound candy box, filled with small cakes and confection, neatly tied. Under the string of each box was a slip with heavy mourning border and Japanese characters, which our guide translated for us as follows: 'Many thanks for your honorable attendance for the funeral of Sem, by deceased wife, today. Excuse for my expressing thanks here instead to call at your residence promptly. Yours respectfully, Umesuke Saiki and relative. 19th day, fourth month, 42d year Maji.' One of these boxes was laid on the floor in front of each person, to be carried away by him. During the early part of the service those who felt disposed smoked the cigarettes provided in the trays, and partook of the tea, which was also served."

The funeral described by Mr. Chapin was held in Yokohama.

Side Lights On The Circus Business

By D. W. WATT

There is one department of the show business that has grown fast in the last thirty years, and that is the wardrobe. In the early days of the Burr Robbins show as soon as they had closed the season in the fall and been put away in winter quarters, the first department for the coming season to receive attention was that of new wardrobe for the parade and grand entry.

Mrs. Burr Robbins was always at the head of this, and was assisted by two expert seamstresses. One large room in the house was set aside for this work, and it was there that the banners for the cages, covers for the elephants and camels and suiting for the drivers were all made for the coming season. Even in that early day there was what they called rainy day costumes, which were always those carried over from the last season, and in case of a muddy, bad lot, all the new wardrobe was never seen. For many years back in the big shows the wardrobe has been one of the features of the parade and the grand entry, and thousands of dollars have been spent in this way. In the great Ringling shows the wardrobe for the big spectacular pieces, which the shows are running this year, have taken weeks of hard work by experts and hundreds of them to complete the wardrobe for these great displays. They, too, always carry what is known as the rainy day costumes.

It was for many years in their earlier career that this show made their wardrobe in their winter quarters under the supervision of the wardrobe women who traveled with the show during the season. But now there are many times many women traveling with the show to look after this wardrobe, do the mending and look after the cleaning and up-keep of this department, while on the road.

The different kinds of wardrobe is always carried in trunks made expressly for this purpose, and it takes an entire car to carry these over the road. This car is one of the first to be unloaded after the dressing room tent is raised.

It takes some time to open all these trunks and get out the different articles that are to be used for that day's parade and grand entry, and it is only possible to do it in short time by having experts that know just where everything is and just where to commence. After a season or two in the business much of this wardrobe is sold to the smaller shows at a very cheap price.

P. J. Tracy, an artist, writing from Saskatoon, says "Not the least wonderful thing to be seen with the Sells-Floto Shows is a set of trappings—elephant trappings used on Lucia Zora's bulls. These are the handsomest as well as the most unique I have ever seen. Even in India, where time is cheap and patience unexcelled, I never saw more intricate and painstaking work.

"This harness, I learn, was made by Fred C. Alispaw, the superintendent of the menagerie. An attendant told me that there were over 60,000 brass ornaments used in embellishing it."

The following and last letter written by Frank Melville many years ago on the big beasts in the show business, should prove interesting, for it gives the real facts as they happened from day to day in his time in the business, and Frank was always identified with the best shows in the business.

"But I don't want any contracts for stopping elephants. Last spring, when we were getting ready to start out from Cooper & Bailey's building, in Philadelphia (their winter quarters), the keeper was trying to teach a cow elephant to go up on a pedestal in the ring. She didn't want to learn, and suddenly made a bolt to get away straight at the door where I was standing. I got up into the loft in about two jumps, and when I came down the keeper said to me, mad as sin, 'Why didn't you stop her?' Well it makes me laugh yet to think of what cheek that man had. He no doubt thought it was easy enough, because he could have done it if he had been there before her, but as for me—I wasn't there to stop elephants.

"The funniest thing I know of, though, about elephants, was old man Lent's adventure with a dwarf Asiatic specimen that he had here in his New York show. It was a comical looking little beast—little for an elephant, that is—with no tusks and ears like wings, and Lent used to try to make a pet of it. He would go into the room where he persisted in keeping it in a heat like that of a bake-oven and would fool about it until the keeper told him to take care or it would hurt him. But he pooh-poohed that. "I'll take my cane and scalp him if he doesn't behave himself,' the old man would say. One night, when Stickney and myself were dressing, we heard from that room, near us, a great noise of somebody coughing, and sputtering, and shouting. 'Ah! Would you? Quit that! Oh!' and calling for help. We ran out, and the sight we saw just paralyzed us both with laughter There was Lent, backed up against the wall, in a corner, and the dwarf elephant trying to butt the life out of him; but the beast's chain was so short that he couldn't get a fair chance at him, and could only sink in his stomach a couple of feet or so at every drive. The keeper soon put a stop to the elephant's fun, but I don't know how long it was before Lent's belly rounded out again to its former fair proportions.

"The most interesting fact ever reported about elephants in this country, is the now seemingly well authenticated story that the cow elephant, Baby, now in Cooper & Bailey's winter building in Philadelphia, is going to have a young one. If that is true, it will be the first elephant calf ever born in captivity, I believe. Baby is the queen of the troupe of five elephants to which she belongs. She manages and bosses them all, and they seem perfectly devoted to her. I saw them crowd together to catch her when she was falling from a breaking pedestal one time, and lower her gently to the ground. Let her call them and they will rush to her, no matter what stands in the way, and they will not allow her to be stuck or hurt. They all seem now to know her condition, and consequently take extraordinary care of her, but she has always been queen among them. She is naturally wiser than any other elephant, and the kindest beast of her sort. She will not break loose herself, or do any mischief, but she will turn the others loose. It is pleasant to witness their affection for her, and how thoughtful they are to guard her aginst all risk. They will not let her get into a dangerous place—crossing a bridge that might break, or a ford in which she might mire—until one of the old males has gone over ahead and trumpeted back that all is safe for her."

SKIN TROUBLE ON HANDS AND FEET.

Similar to Ringworm. Tiny Clear Blisters, Skin Rough and Cracked Open. Could Scarcely Use Hands. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Completely Rid of Trouble.

Caseville, Mo.—"My hands and feet were affected with a trouble similar to ringworm for a number of years. It first appeared as tiny clear blisters and in places the blisters were so close together that they almost formed one large blister. The skin was rough and cracked open. At times it was so bad that it disabled me; my hands became so sore that I could scarcely use them.

"I used every remedy that I could find but nothing seemed to do any good. Finally I sent for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I then got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment which completely rid me of the trouble." (Signed) Ray Bryant, Mar. 14, 1914.

Samples Free by Mail

A generation of mothers has found no soap so well suited for cleansing and purifying the skin and hair of infants and children as Cuticura Soap. Its absolute purity and refreshing fragrance alone are enough to recommend it above ordinary skin soaps, but there are added to these qualities delicate yet effective emollient properties derived from Cuticura Ointment, which render it most valuable in overcoming a tendency to distressing eruptions and promoting skin and hair health. Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

ORFORDVILLE

Orfordville, Aug. 7.—J. S. Naugle and wife were in the village for a short time on Friday.

H. C. Taylor took an auto load to the Janesville Chautauqua on Friday afternoon.

Al Schroder of Stoughton is in the village looking at the prospects for tobacco hereabouts.

Mrs. H. O. Wee was called to Janesville on Thursday evening on account of the illness and death of her uncle, Mr. Halverson.

The force of foreigners that have been assisting on the railroad for the past few weeks have all been called in, and have gone to Chicago, whether to enlist in the war in the old country was not learned.

Miss Ethel Compton, who has been spending a three weeks' vacation with friends in Minnesota, has returned and resumed her position at the post-office.

The railroad has shipped the cement for the walks that will be built across their land at the sides of the street that was recently opened, and the work of building the walk will probably be begun in a short time.

C. H. Christianson of Beloit was in the village for a few hours on Friday attempting to interest the public hereabouts on the subject of district attorney from his point of view.

EAST PORTER

East Porter, Aug. 7.—A large number from here attended the funeral of T. Moore today.

Mrs. J. Condon is spending the week in Edgerton.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Grady of Sun Prairie called on friends in this vicinity Monday.

Mrs. J. Murphy and daughter Anna spent yesterday in Evansville.

The picnic given by the Leyden creamery company Sunday was well attended.

A large crowd attended the T. A. & B. picnic and dance in Edgerton Wednesday.

Miss Alice Kealy of Janesville spent Sunday at home.

Miss Marguerite Madden of Edgerton spent the week at the home of E. Fox.

M. Ludden of Evansville spent a few days at the home of R. Stearns.

Threshing machines are now heard in this vicinity.

The crops in this vicinity are in need of rain very much.

LIMA

Lima, August 7.—Miss Hazel Hunt was given a surprise party on Friday evening by her young friends, the occasion being her birthday.

Mrs. Miller was up from the Junction Friday and spent the day with her daughter, Mrs. Richmond.

M. L. Saxe is having his store property painted.

The cry of "fire" startled our citizens on Thursday afternoon, and upon investigation it was found that the kitchen in the house occupied by Will Dixon and family was on fire. There were plenty of men in town at the time and with three good wells close by, the building was saved. The loss has not been adjusted yet.

Mr. Spence has been given his job as foreman on the track again.

EMERALD GROVE

Emerald Grove, August 6.—Rev. O'Neil and family have returned home after a visit with relatives at Packwaukee. There will be church services at the usual hour tomorrow.

Miss Myra Briggs of Johnstown has been a guest of her sister, Mrs. H. Chamberlain for a few days.

Mrs. H. Walthers entertained friends from Janesville last Wednesday.

The Argonauts Of Forty-Nine.

Old Diary Tells Story of Mad Rush Across the Continent.

By M. M. Quaife, superintendent of the Wisconsin State Historical society.

One day in January, 1848, a workman engaged in digging a mill-race on the American river observed some yellow particles of metal glittering in the sand. Gathering a quantity he took them to his employer, and together the two men subjected them to some rude tests which satisfied them that the shining grains were pure gold.

Such was the famous discovery of gold in California. The thrilling secret could not be kept, although California was then so remote a place that several months passed before the outside world became aware of it. Seldom has the news of a discovery been attended by more dramatic consequences. It threw the civilized world into a fever of anticipation. It started throngs of fortune-seekers—cutthroats, gamblers, laborers, physicians, farmers, preachers—on a mad race for California. It precipitated the great sectional crisis of 1850, the most serious in our history between 1787 and 1861, and it compelled the government to admit California to statehood before ever she had become a territory.

An old diary, now in the possession of the Wisconsin Historical society, portrays vividly the experiences of one Wisconsin band of Argonauts who crossed the continent in the summer of 1849 in search of the golden fleece. The fortune-seekers, five in number, were all residents of Madison, the capital of the youthful state. Their first step was to organize a company, equipped with appropriate officers and laws and regulations. The company, to which all contributed equally, then purchased the equipment for the long journey, the principal items being a heavy covered wagon and a six-mule team. One interesting by-law provided that in addition to the company property each member must equip himself with "a good rifle, pistol and knife."

From early March until August the toilsome journey lasted. The route led over rugged mountain ranges, and through burning deserts where men and horses alike were in danger of perishing from thirst. At one place "ten men and ten mules were barely sufficient to manage an empty wagon." This place our diarist, with grim humor, decides to name the "Devil's Stairs." Another time a band of Crow Indians, bent on stampeding the mules of the party, raided the camp by night. But the affray passed off without loss to either party "except the powder and lead, which was wasted profusely by both."

More successful thieves were the coyotes, who stole the last pound of pork from the party "when we were awake and had a good watch dog on guard, and the pork lying within four feet of our heads."

No less than forty thousand gold-seekers crossed the plains this summer of 1849, and as many more reached California by water, either crossing the Isthmus of Panama or rounding Cape Horn. Hardship and privation awaited them all, dazzling fortunes the few, and poverty, disease and death the many. Our party of Argonauts was more fortunate than most, but listen to this picture, which is only one of many observed by the diarist: "A lone woman riding on a skeleton of a horse, and driving two cows that were but the shadow of what they once had been, when grazing quietly on the prairies of Illinois. The woman's dress consisted of what might once have been a decent covering, but at this time it was of a truth the evidence of things not seen." The woman hailed from Illinois, and she with her decrepit live stock was all that remained of a husband, wife, and three children, fifteen or twenty head of cattle, a wagon, and eight hundred dollars in money. Even so she was not disheartened, and begged only for advice as to what she should do. This was freely tendered by everyone; no two of the advisors agreeing, however, the only result was the heightening of the poor woman's bewilderment, until at length our practical minded diarist suggested that they pass the hat, which was promptly done. The writer concludes the incident by recording that he returned home "one ounce lighter of pocket, but none the poorer at heart."

The California gold-rush was a gamble in which few won, but the stakes were high, and men willingly took terrible chances. At the end of August, the diary before us records, hundreds of destitute emigrants were strolling up and down the river bank in quest of gold, knowing as little about prospecting for it "as they do about prospecting for it "as they do forts of life." On the other hand the writer's party less than four weeks later took out $842 worth of gold in a single day. The next day the forenoon was spent in repairing the dam; the afternoon yielded about $250 in gold. This the treasurer carried to camp in a common washing pan, and setting it on the roof to dry, proceeded to forget about it. Someone else was more thoughtful, however, for in the morning when inquiry was made for the gold the pan and its contents had vanished.

Amid such scenes as these, less than two generations ago, were laid the foundations of the Golden state.

JOHNSTOWN

Johnstown, August 7.—James Madden of Chicago is spending the week with his wife and children at the parental home.

Mrs. Frank Hiderman and three children of Beloit returned home Wednesday after visiting with the home folks for the past week.

Michael Kemmitt is gradually failing. His daughter, Mrs. Malone, is helping care for him.

Threshing is progressing nicely. The weather has been fine and there are seven machines within a few miles of each other. Barley and timothy are yielding well and of good quality.

C. Craig is feeling some better at the present.

Mrs. Wm. Bell is gaining from her recent illness.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Pinnow and family spent Sunday with their sister, Mrs. Klug, of Richmond.

The Misses Mary and Mable Taylor visited relatives in Milton on Wednesday.

Messrs. and Mesdames W. Wilbur, W. Morgan, and families spent Sunday at Lauderdale Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson of Koshkonong were recent guests of their friend, Mrs. Catherine Wood.

WEST MAGNOLIA

West Magnolia, Aug. 6.—R. E. Acheson was an Evansville visitor Tuesday.

D. Drew was a business caller here Monday.

Miss Cecile Needham of Chicago and Miss Gladys Mulcahy of Footville are visiting at John Needham's home.

Miss Joe Needham was a Footville caller Wednesday.

Mrs. Walton of Evansville visited relatives here this week.

Threshing is progressing nicely, as the weather was very favorable the past week.

LA PRAIRIE

La Prairie, Aug. 8.—There will be regular services at the La Prairie Grange Hall Sunday, Aug. 9. All plan to attend.

Town Line, Aug. 7.—Mr. and Mrs. Steinaker are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Julien of Milwaukee. The Misses Gladys and Marion Turner of Chicago are also guests at the Steinaker home.

Fred Walters' condition is not improved.

Mrs. L. J. McCrea and brother, F. R. Eldredge, were recent visitors with relatives at Hebron, Ill.

Miss Ada Wachlin was the guest of Miss Helen Throne of Beloit a couple of days this week.

First Real Mineral Waters.

The manufacture of mineral waters "upon correct chemical principles" was undertaken in America as early as 1806. This was merely "charged water," but it was a great novelty in the days when lack of traveling facilities made the mineral springs remote for many. In 1809 the first establishment was started in New York city.

What Was Accomplished After Only Two Months' Treatment

Skill of DR. GODDARD, Specialist, Overcomes Baffling Trouble.

Chronic ailments require special attention. Such troubles are due to causes which must be determined before improvement can be expected. Haphazard doctoring will not help the case in most instances for delay in experimenting gives the disease time to become deep seated. The original distinctive and scientific methods employed by Dr. Goddard make this specialist tremendously successful in eradicating obstinate troubles. No particular case has caused more comment perhaps, than that of Miss Van Patten, who tells her story as follows:

Dear Doctor:

"I take great pleasure in writing, being so pleased with the rapid improvement of my health since I began to Doctor with you. The Doctors I had before did not seem to help me at all.

After taking your treatment for just one week, I did not feel like the same person, one month and a half afterward I was completely cured. I am now well and strong, can eat anything I want, sleep well, have no headache or dizzy spells. I thank you for helping me.

Yours truly,

Marion Van Patten.

The New Hudson Six-40 for 1915

Will be here Sunday Morning

NEW PRICE
$1,550 F. O. B. Detroit

The Exquisite Six

31 New Features

The HUDSON Six-40 for 1915 brings out 31 new features. All last year the HUDSON engineers worked on nothing but refinements. There are new beauties, new comforts, new conveniences.

Howard E. Coffin and his 47 engineers have now devoted four years to this model. And they offer you here what they consider the ideal modern car.

Last season's model was the first quality Six to sell under $2,000. The price then was $1,750.

It established new light-weight standards. It weighed 1,000 pounds less than former averages for cars of this capacity. This was accomplished, without sacrifice of strength, by clever designing and proper materials.

Its new-type motor reduced operative cost about 30 per cent for cars of this capacity.

Its lines, its finish, its perfect equipment made it immensely attractive.

The demand for that car broke all HUDSON records. At the end of the season there were 3,000 unfilled orders.

Now we want you to see what a year of refinement has done for this model Six.

Price $200 Lower

The HUDSON factory, to meet the demand for this car, has trebled its capacity. It will next year build three times as many cars. And the quantity saving of $200 per car has been taken from the price.

The HUDSON Six-40 for 1915 will sell at $1,550, f. o. b. Detroit. No comparable car—either a Four or a Six—has ever approached this price.

This means a revolution.

It means, in the first place, a new price standard for high grade cars.

It means a new weight standard.

It means new artistic standards.

It means that legions of men to whom Sixes were barred can now afford the finest type of Six.

And it means that men who pay over $1,200 will not hereafter need to buy a Four.

Some 1915 Features

Distinguished streamline body.
Disappearing tonneau seats.
20-coat finish — invisible hinges.
"One-Man" top, with quick-adjusting curtains attached.
Gasoline tank in dash.
Dimming searchlights.
Extra tires carried ahead of front door.
Simplified Delco starting, lighting and ignition system.
Wiring in metal conduits.
Lock on ignition and lights.
Automatic spark advance.
Better carburation.
Weight reduced to 2,890

This new Six-40 is an exquisite car. It will interest every motorist. It will show you the trend in motor car designing. When such a car is sold at such a price, there are many old ideas on cars which will need to be revised.

This new model arrives here Sunday morning. Don't buy until you see it.

Last Stage of Eruption—This photo Taken Three Miles from Mount Lassen

The Eruption at Its Zenith—Photographer was Driven Back From Summit by Smoke and Huge Rocks from Crater

Mount Lassen before Eruption

Mt. Lassen, California's New Product, Gives Promise of Developing Into a Real Volcano - Smoke and Ashes Now Issuing In Immense Volume.

WHERE the mighty mountain-chains of the Coast Range and Sierra Nevadas meet in northeastern California stands Mount Lassen—the only active volcano in continental United States. Towering 10,437 feet above the level of the sea, and topping the surrounding country by 5,000 to 6,000 feet, Mount Lassen broke into violent eruption on Memorial Day, after a sleep of centuries. A flood of smoke, steam and ashes poured from the crater, and giant boulders thundered forth from the belching pit, to crash down the mountain side. Several eruptions have followed the initial outburst, and the giant crater is seething and rumbling, hurling forth clouds of smoke and steam, with the mountain top crumbling into the vast opening.

The eruptions have generally lasted from ten to thirty minutes, with the vast pillar of smoke at times attaining a height of two to three miles, with two and three outbursts occurring in a single day. Vast quantities of sulphur have been belched forth, and fierce rains of ashes have buried the snowy peaks beneath their murky blanket. Neighboring creeks have been so filled with ashes from the yawning crater that their waters have become unfit for use, and all around the volcano, for miles and miles, the country is buried under ashes and huge boulders poured forth by the mountain in its agony. And it is the opinion of geologists and scientific investigators that Mount Lassen has only started a period of intense activity.

Signs Of Activity.

For weeks preceding the outburst numerous geysers and boiling mud springs at the base of the mountain developed unusual activity. At Bumpass' Hell, a weird caldron-like depression near the southern base of the great peak, huge mud springs started to cast forth vast quantities of boiling earth and water. And then came the first eruption. Intense excitement naturally followed the spectacle, and when the eruptions grew fiercer and more frequent hundreds of people sped by automobiles to the base of the peak. The forest rangers speedily warned all of the danger attending ascent of the rumbling mountain, but scores insisted on climbing to the summit. Numerous narrow escapes were reported, one party being lost for two days in the cloud of blackness that overspread the peak when ashes and smoke belched in vast volleys from the crater. James Graham, a lumberman and member of this party, was seriously injured by a huge boulder smiting him in the darkness, and the others saved their lives by luckily finding shelter under ledges of rocks.

Mount Lassen is a snow-capped peak and towers over a great volcanic ridge fifty miles long and 25 miles wide, formed of a great mass of volcanic cones. Evidences of comparatively recent volcanic activity are abundant, and geologists estimate that 200 years ago Cinder Cone, a mountain ten miles northeast of Lassen, poured a flood of lava over the surrounding area. The ridge has been built up of lava issuing from more than 120 vents, and that many of the volcanoes were of enormous size is shown by the numerous giant craters, some of which are more than a mile in diameter. The great lava-covered area produced by these volcanoes covers approximately 200,000 squares miles, a territory in which Great Britain and France might be comfortably settled, with considerable country still unused. It is said to be the largest lava field in the world, covering as it does great portions of California, Oregon and Idaho, and even extending into Washington and Montana. At the height of the volcanic activity it is believed more than a dozen huge volcanoes were erupting at the same time, including the great Mount Shasta, which poured a great flood of molten lava into the Sacramento valley for fifty miles.

A Desolate Country.

For miles in all directions from Mt. Lassen the country presents a sterile appearance, the nearest towns of importance lying 55 to 65 miles distant in an air-line. Volcanic activity has been so recent the elements have not had time to reduce the lava to soil, and save for heavy timber and underbrush in sections of the great expanse of barren rocks, little in the way of vegetable life occurs. At the base of Mount Lassen is Manzanite Lake, a sheet of water covering about eighty acres, thickly surrounded with forests and receiving its waters from the snow piled high on the great volcano. Higher up are found vast belts of sand, strewn with huge masses of rocks. At Cinder Cone the tops of dead trees, victims of a former eruption, protrude through the rocks and ashes and sand, and growing on the more recent soil is a forest of pine trees, many showing a diameter of twelve feet. The new forest is further away from the crater than the ancient growth, and its picture of sparkling life in the midst of deadly desolation and dispiriting expanse forms a strange and never-to-be-forgotten sight. Near the crater the sand is seven to ten feet deep, but disappears to make place for lava a few miles from the peak.

In all directions tower massive mountains, their snow-capped heads piercing the wonderfully-blue heavens. Burney Butte, Crater Peak, Butt Mountain and other Titans rear their hoary heads, ranging from 10,000 to 14,000 feet high, forming a scene of surpassing grandeur. And high over all, the Ajax of the range, looms the mighty peak of Shasta, snow-veiled and apart, mounting guard from the skies.

Rocks Hurled High In Air.

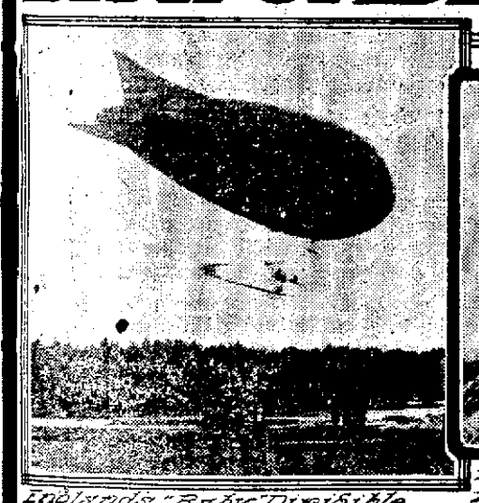

Mount Lassen no longer gleams white in her mantle of snow. Black ashes have covered the snow-drifts to a depth of many inches, and all around the crater huge rocks weighing 20 to 100 pounds are strewn. Many of these rocks have been hurled 200 to 400 yards from the crater, and the various eruptions have been so sudden that great danger naturally attends the ascent of the peak. The great crater is constantly growing larger and is nearing the rim of the old crater, which formerly poured its lava down the mountain. Late in June this new crater was about 500 feet long and 80 feet wide, and estimated to be from 100 to 200 feet in depth.

The eruptions are generally preceded by a rush of steam and then the smoke pours forth like a giant mushroom. At its zenith the huge smoke-column seems like a titanic dynamite blast, only immeasurably more terrible and awesome. At times the smoke pours forth in puffs, as though actuated by a rapid series of subterranean explosions of terrific intensity. But generally it ascends steadily, mounting higher and higher until the fierce winds that constantly scourge the lofty peak scatter the murky pall far over the land. Practically all the eruptions have exceeded a mile in height. This distance has not been roughly estimated, but established authoritatively by means of scientific instruments. The eruptions have been plainly visible at Chico, Portola and other towns more than 150 miles distant, and showers of sulphur have been carried to great distances from the volcano. Slight earthquakes have been felt in districts tributary to the volcanic range, but whether these disturbances are due to the mountain has not been conclusively established.

Compared To Vesuvius.

Mount Lassen is more than twice the height of Vesuvius, the famous Italian volcano rising 4,000 feet above the sea, compared with the 10,437 feet of Lassen. But there is a remarkable similarity between the craters of Vesuvius and Cinder Cone. The lava on the slopes of Vesuvius is more smooth than that on Lassen, the rough character of the latter being particularly marked. The craters also differ in this respect, but each have the same conical shape and depressions. If Lassen develops into a second Vesuvius it will be a vastly greater volcano, its immense height and enormous extent assuring this. Despite the evidences of recent volcanic activity, Lassen was considered extinct before the late outburst, and its sudden activity proves that the subterranean forces are still active, and that the near future is likely to develop events of potential importance in this region. So important is the outburst considered that the United States government has taken cognizance of its new wonder, and Prof. J. S. Diller of the Geological Survey has been detailed to examine the peak and make a report. Through its corps of forest rangers the government is also keeping in close touch with Lassen.

Ever Since 1783 the Europeans Have Taken Special Interest In Aeronautics - The Evolution of the Balloon and the Many Disasters That Have Occurred During Aerial Experiments.

THE first balloon ascension took place in Paris, France, in 1783, when the Montgolfier brothers sent up a huge round, gas-filled balloon from the Champ de Mars August twenty-seventh of that year. An enormous crowd saw the ascension and France became balloon crazy. Societies were formed for the purpose of encouraging experiments in aeronautics and large sums of money were subscribed to aid in the work. Today the same thing exists not only in France but all over Europe and millions of dollars are being spent in experiments in air travel. Shortly after the Montgolfier ascension the scientists built the egg-shaped balloon bag, later the fish type, and finally the cigar-shaped envelope of the present day. Many lives were lost and thousands of dollars were spent in various try outs.

Screw Propellers In 1850.

As early as 1850 the idea of screw propellers worked by hand cropped up as the best solution of a means of propulsion, and strange as it may seem, the shape, rigidity and screws thought of so early in the history of ballooning were on lines almost identical with those of the present time. The aeronauts of those days were, however, handicapped by the lack of a suitable engine such as the motors now used, and it was not until 1872 that one of even a moderately successful type was constructed. This was built in Vienna after the plans of Paul Haelein and closely resembles the French military dirigible of today, although it was a mere baby as compared with the ones used at present. The driving power was an innovation gas engine of the Lenoir type, the gas being taken from the balloon itself, which loss was made good by inflating balloonets inside the main envelope with air. Coal gas was used to inflate the bag but the lift was very slight and very little speed was obtained.

During the siege of Paris, Dupuy de Lome, a marine engineer, built a dirigible balloon for the French Government, but it, too, proved to be of little value. In 1882 the Tissandier brothers constructed a spindle-shaped airship, which had a wooden stay through the centre of the envelope. This was supposed to render it more rigid in traveling through the air—one of the features of the Zeppelins of today. While this machine lifted well and flew it lacked in speed and was considered a failure.

Next came the "La France," built by French army officers in 1884. They ascended in the machine and flew two and one-half miles, returning to the point of starting—the first time such a thing had been accomplished in aeronautics. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed over this feat and France rested on her laurels for a time declaring that they had succeeded in making the real dirigible.

In the meantime, two Germans, Doctor Wolfert and Herr Bumgarten, built a cigar-shaped dirigible, which rose to the height of five or six hundred feet, but later it exploded from some unknown cause.

The aluminum frame airship was first built by a man named Schwartz, but he died before it was fully tried, and the machine was afterward wrecked by coming to earth too suddenly.

Santos-Dumont.

Then Santos Dumont, a young Brazilian less than twenty-five years of age, came in the field in Paris and built his famous Santos-Dumont balloons one after another. Several times he barely escaped with his life but he continued to "try, try again" and became known throughout the world as the "man bird." Besides being endowed with determination, pluck and common sense, Monsieur Santos-Dumont possessed ample means to carry on his work, and he finally succeeded in surprising everybody by his control of aircraft. With his No. 4 balloon he sailed around the Eiffel Tower in Paris, and won a $20,000 prize. His No. 6 was wrecked at Monaco, and he just escaped drowning. No. 9, a small dirigible, was his masterpiece. He loved the limelight and his clever management of this machine won him undying fame.

First Military Balloon In 1902.

In 1902 Paris set about to find somebody who could build a dirigible suitable for military purposes, for despite the success of the Dumont machines they were unsuited for army work. The Lebauby brothers, Frenchmen of wealth and education, experimented for some time and finally presented the Government with the results of their work.

The famous "Patrie" on which France set so much store was lost in the north of Ireland after it had crossed the English Channel. The propellers were broken in landing and the aircraft drifted out to sea and was never found.

Most people remember the great cigar-shaped "Ville de Paris," with its heavy engine and its lack of speed. The "Bayard-Clement" did some remarkable flying at the French manoeuvres when the artillery men of that country made so many unsuccessful attempts to hit the huge "flier" as it hovered over the camp. This machine soon became a familiar sight to the residents of Paris as any number of flights were made over the city—in fact, it became such a common sight that few people stopped to view it.

Germany has made more progress in dirigible balloons than any other country, due to the work of Count Zeppelin and Major Von Parseval, both of whom are retired army officers in the German army.

Count Zeppelin's Work.

When the Schwartz airship made its attempted ascension in 1897 Count Zeppelin was an interested spectator. The Count had always been a believer in the "rigid" type and the failure of the craft was a great disappointment. He, however, still believed this type of machine was the best, and after organizing a company in which the King of Wurtemberg was a large stockholder, for the purpose of building airships, he decided to construct his flier in a large floating shed on Lake Constance, thus enabling the trial flights to be started and terminated in the water rather than to risk the machine by a too rapid descent on land. In July, 1900, the first ascent of the Zeppelin balloon was made over Lake Constance. It was an enormous affair, four hundred and twenty feet long and thirty-eight feet in diameter. There were several mishaps in the first trial and the airship was not a real success. Five years later Count Zeppelin turned out another machine of a slightly different type, but this, too, met with a mishap by colliding with trees. "Zeppelin 4" exploded and was totally destroyed after completing a trip of three hundred and seventy-eight miles in little more than thirty-one hours. By this time Germany, like France, had a case of balloon fever and the Zeppelin fund amounted to over a million and a half and new Zeppelins were rapidly constructed. All the machines of this type have the rigid or non-collapsible envelope, affording a perfectly rigid connection between itself and the car, engine and propellers which drive the entire vessel forward. Many scientists declare that the landing of a Zepplin machine is dangerous in anything but calm weather. This may be true as evidenced from the fact that the passengers will not be carried except in calm weather. It is the proud boast of the Zeppelin Company that although they have carried thousands of persons on air excursions they have never killed a passenger. The men who have gone to their death have been soldiers or officials who were trying out new experiments.

Zeppelin Accidents.

Count Zeppelin's machines have many times met with disaster, and some of them in a curious way. "Zeppelin 2" struck a tree and was wrecked. The "Deutschland" was ruined in the Teuloburgian forest by landing on the tops of the trees. Thirty-three passengers were on board and they all escaped unhurt by climbing down the trees. "Deutschland 2" was jammed against the walls of her hangar and wrecked. The "Schwaben" was blown to pieces at Dusseldorf in 1911 and thirty-four soldiers were injured. The Zeppelin marine airship "L. 1" was destroyed in the North Sea, causing the death of fifteen men. This was due to a hurricane encountered at a height of five thousand feet.

On October seventeenth of last year the Zeppelin "L. 2" exploded in the air while on a trial trip. This accident occurred at Johannisthal, near Berlin, and cost the lives of several eminent officers of the German army and navy. Twenty-eight officers and men perished.

The Parseval Balloons.

The "Parseval" is of an entirely different type, being non-rigid, yet it has been no more successful in flights and in avoiding accidents. Three distinct types of this aircraft have made their appearance in Germany, but none of them have been able to cope with the Zeppelin in speed. Descriptions of both of these and the Zeppelins have been published so often that it seems unnecessary to repeat them and bore the reader with technicalities. One thing, however, is curious in the make-up of the Parseval—the system of attachment between the car and the envelope called the "loose" suspension. On each side of the car are trolleys running on steel cables, and the car can run backward and forward on them thus changing its position with relation to the envelope automatically according to the thrust of the motor and the degree of air resistance.

Various accidents have happened to this type of flier—some of them rather curious. For instance, in 1908 one of them buckled in the air, yet Major Von Parseval, who was flying the machine at the time, was able to descend in safety. At another time one of the machines struck a balloon shed and collapsed.

The latest disaster—the collision in midair of an aeroplane and dirigible near Vienna, is the most remarkable in the history of aviation. The balloon was of the Parseval type and had made a number of flights.

England, Italy And Switzerland.

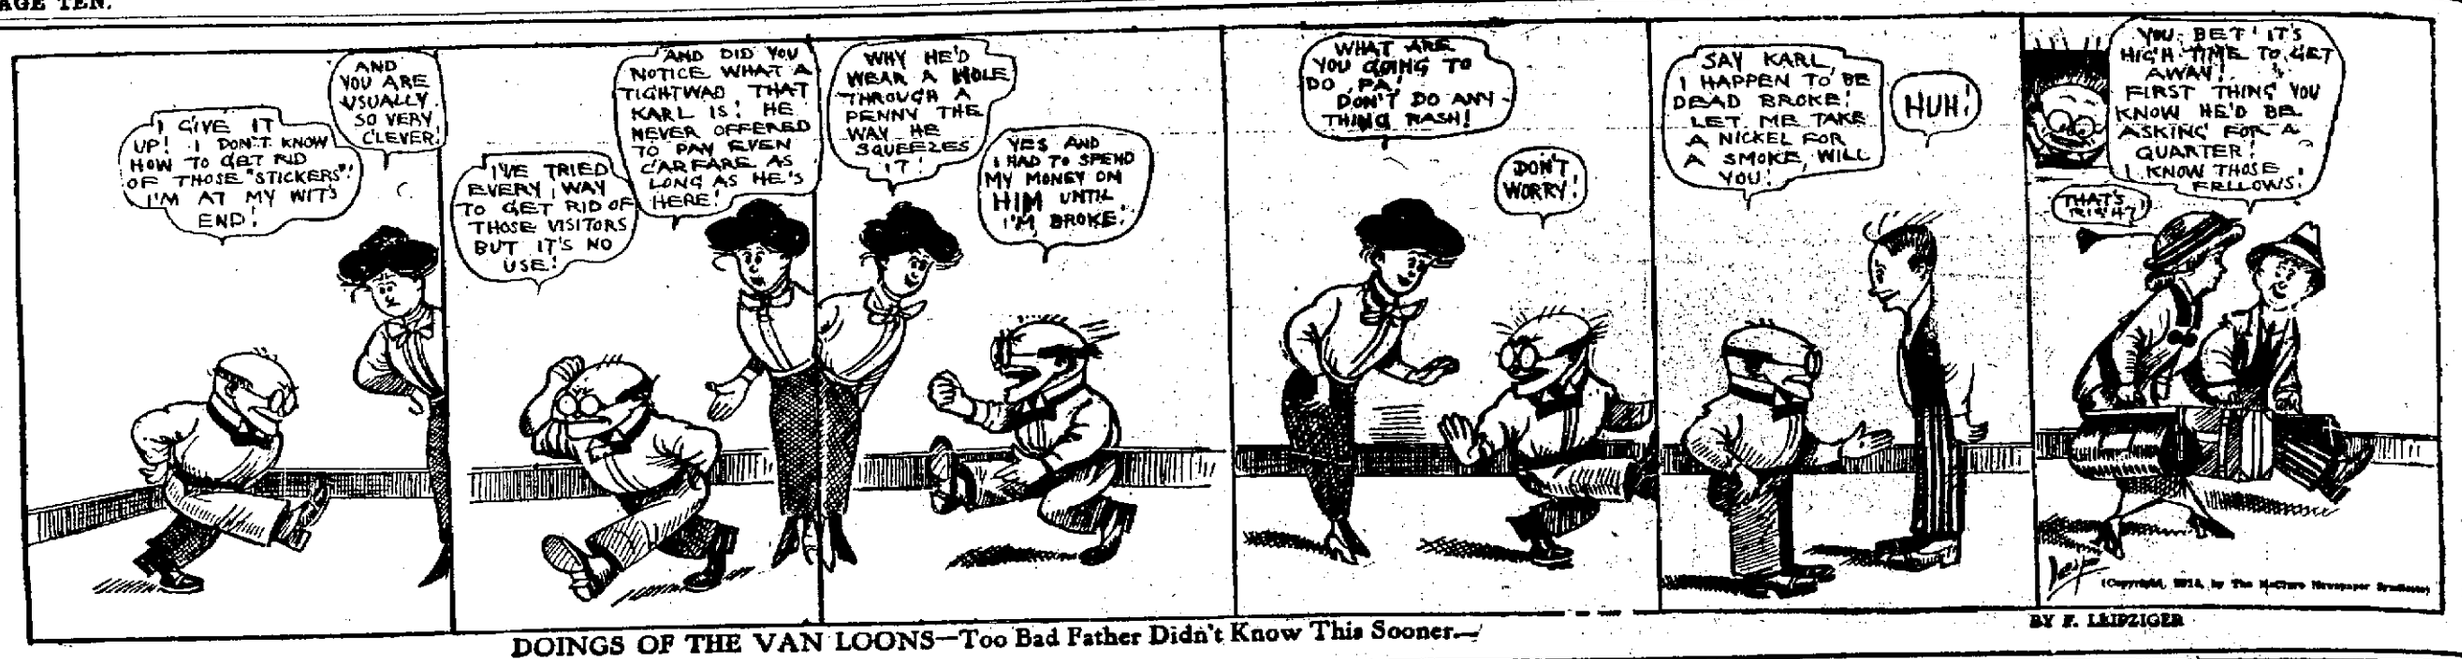

England has dabbled very little in dirigible balloons, preferring aeroplanes. The "Baby" army dirigible and the "Nulli Secondus," however, are well known fliers. Colonel Templer, the superintendent of the Army Balloon Department at Aldershot, is the Zeppelin of England, although very little has been heard of his work.

The Italian military dirigible resembles a swordfish, and great secrecy is maintained about its mechanism.

Switzerland, too, has experimented in airships, but they are used for carrying passengers. The "Lucerne I." and "Lucerne II." both of the French type, have made successful trips over Lake Lucerne and one of them made a flight over the Rigi, which is about eight thousand feet in height.

These accidents and fatalities have not deterred airship building or flying and every day during the summer flights are made. Scores of Americans boast of "flying in Europe." The price of an aerial outing ranges from twenty-five to one hundred dollars, according to the length of the flight. Food and drinks are frequently served aloft, the writer being present at one of these feasts. The inevitable post card seller is on board in the shape of the steward, who when he is not serving the inner man is inveigling people into buying post cards. These he stamps with the Zeppelin stamp, which proves that the writer was "up in the air" when the card was written.

Flying through the air in one of these big machines is a delightful experience and well worth the risk if the passenger likes excitement and does not suffer from "nerves."

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—Too Bad Father Didn't Know This Sooner.—

THIS WOMAN'S SICKNESS

Quickly Yielded To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Baltimore, Md. — "I am more than glad to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I suffered dreadful pains and was very irregular. I became alarmed and sent for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly until I was without a cramp or pain and felt like another person, and it has now been six months since I took any medicine at all. I hope my little note will assist you in helping other women. I now feel perfectly well and in the best of health." — Mrs. AUGUST W. KONDNER, 1632 Hollins Street, Baltimore, Md.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

When the back begins to ache,
Don't wait until backache becomes chronic:
'Till Kidney troubles develop;
'Till urinary troubles destroy night's rest.
Profit by a Janesville citizen's experience.

J. W. Roberts, 222 Park St., Janesville, says: "For years I had trouble from irregular and painful action of my kidneys. I had to get up at night and in the morning I felt tired out. My back ached and I had sore spots over my kidneys. I could hardly straighten after stooping over. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended in the Gazette, so I used some. I want to say that they relieved the pains and put my kidneys in fine shape. I no longer had to get up at night and I felt fine in the morning. I have taken them off and on since and they have kept my kidneys and back free from pain."

Fine Feathers

By WEBSTER DENISON

(Copyright A. C. McClurg & Co., 1914)

Diversions were not plentiful and indeed there was little need of them. Bob's day in the city, his long trip home, the dinner, his hour with his garden and Jane's daily struggle with domestic duties left little energy for nocturnal pastime. An hour or two usually found them ready for the little room at the back, which, though dignified nominally as a guest's chamber, they had commandeered for sleeping purposes themselves. This room and the kitchen, with a bath between, divided the space in back of the long living room. Here the builder had recompensed himself for such extravagances as were indulged in in the front. The room was of barren simplicity; severe white walls, a window, closet, and door to the bathroom with woodwork of the cheapest spruce.

The only access to the second story was the stairway in the kitchen. There were two rooms there. A long one across the front of the house, but, on account of the sloping roof, much narrower than the one below and with a lower ceiling. The other was above the guest chamber, while the space over the kitchen was left unfinished for storeroom purposes.

"Space galore," said Meade as he eyed these unused rooms. "You might take a boarder."

"Try us and see, Dick. I know one we would be glad to have, wouldn't we, Jane?" her husband answered.

"Certainly. Why don't you do it, Dick? Just think what a help you'd be, too."

"Sure. Little Tom Sawyer here would let me weed the garden and feed his hens and, maybe, if I were real good, you'd let me wash the dishes."

"Well, I'd consider it."

"I wouldn't like anything better, Jane, but you know a newspaper man keeps rather strenuous hours. Sometimes I'm through at midnight and sometimes at four in the morning. I'd have to make a swim of it if I wanted to get across the bay at that hour. No, I guess I am doomed to the hall bedroom in Washington square."

"And the little place on the corner, Dick. Don't omit that; the place where they uncrown monarchs, divide Rockefeller's millions and drown all social ills in a flood of amber and foam. Honest, now, isn't that what you're thinking of as much as the swim across the bay? But, speaking of corners, we've got one ourselves. There's a little, fat German two blocks down the street who'd just love to talk Schopenhauer with you."

"No doubt I'll meet him, Bob. I'll need both philosophy and his merchandise as a bracer for the return trip."

"You're not going back tonight, Dick," Jane announced. "Stay and go with Bob in the morning. Why, you'll miss half the fun of you don't have one of our commuters' breakfasts. Up with the birds, you know. Coffee and rolls at five-thirty and new-laid eggs—if there are any. That's the time when you get the true bucolic spirit."

A note of irony in her tone brought Bob with a start.

"No, little rebel," he exclaimed, "you don't have to get up at five-thirty and you know it. I could fix that morning repast in two minutes if you'd let me."

"But I won't. I'd feel fine lying in bed like some Fifth avenue beauty, with my husband puttering around with a frying pan and coffee pot. No, thank you. The day is long enough without you as it is."

Dick offered solace. "Bob isn't the only beneficiary, Jane. You know early rising is good for the complexion, and now I know the secret of yours."

She courtesied. "Pocitively, Dick, you're getting bearable. If I had to choose another husband I wouldn't scratch socialists off my eligible list at all. If there's only one egg in the morning you shall have it."

"Is that a likely contingency?"

"Ask Bob. We've been drawing lots for it for the past week. It's the season when the maternal instinct predominates the sense of domestic duty in the hennery. Of course there are store eggs to piece out with, but they don't count."

They went downstairs and Jane took up her embroidery while the men tempted fortune at auction pinochle with a third hand dead.

"That's my favorite game," Bob told Dick. "Jane and I nearly always play it. We like the third hand because it kind o' makes us think of some visitor who doesn't come. Callers are pretty scarce, aren't they, Jane?"

"Yes, but we make up in quality what we lack in quantity—Dick and Mrs. Collins."

"Flattered, I'm sure," laughed Dick. "Who is the lady?"

"A Staten Island beauty you'd just dote on. A sort of a Titian futurist, and so cultured. We'll have to have her and the little Herr Host of the cor-her around for dinner the next time you come."

She put down her work and walked to Bob, bestowing a good-night kiss.

"You men can sit up as late as you want," she said, "but nine o'clock is Cinderella's hour for me. Good night, Dick. Remember the egg and get up when I call you."

"Au revoir, princess. We're both loath to have you go, but I think one more game will find us following suit." And Bob agreed.

In the morning there was great rejoicing when an early raid on the Plymouth Rocks yielded four eggs; a most unwonted but not unneeded display of energy on the part of the fowls. A hurried breakfast, and the men bade Jane good-by and were off for the city.

CHAPTER III.

A Cloud in Elysium.

Spring waned and summer came. The sun beat down with dull persistency, and baked the sand and shriveled up the heading lettuce in Bob's garden. It scored the scant foliage of the new-set trees and scorched the lawn he had coaxed from seed. The house offered the only shelter, and even that was hot. Jane made two or three excursions to the beaches with Mrs. Collins, but these necessitated tiresome rides on crowded trolleys, so she abandoned them and stayed closely at home with nothing but her work, her books and idle chats with her neighbors to while away the hours of the long, hot day.

At night Bob puffed prodigiously at cheap, black cigars while he sat outside after dinner and battled with an endless host of mosquitoes. When he had smoked himself dizzy he would succumb to a superior force and join Jane inside. Lights made it more uncomfortable within, so, usually, they sat in the dark and talked until bedtime.

Friends came from the city occasionally, but their visits were not frequently repeated. It was a tremendous trip from Harlem or the Heights, where their few acquaintances lived, and one by one all but Dick dropped away. He came regularly every Wednesday.

They tried two or three trips to New York themselves, but the distance made these a hardship rather than a pleasure and there was the added expense. Once when they attempted a little dinner after a night at a roof garden they missed the last boat and had to stay at a hotel. Bob tried to conceal his misgivings as to how this would affect the week's finances, but Jane knew. They gave it up and stayed at home.

So the summer passed and fall came. Bob missed his garden. Frost nipped the tomatoes that had been so late in starting and this marked the last of their outdoor activities. The monotony for both began to pall, but they hid their feelings from each other.

More and more Jane sought refuge in the futile companionship of the gossiping Mrs. Collins. They went occasionally to New York for the matinees, but more frequently to spend an afternoon in idle wandering through the stores, for the funds of each were frugal. They were returning from such a journey one evening in late October.

"Come in and rest a minute," Jane invited, as they reached her bungalow. "I know I'm tired and I guess you are."

"Going to the matinee from Staten Island sure does one up," Mrs. Collins acquiesced and she glanced about with a longing air as if she hoped her neighbor might offer something in the way of resuscitation.

Jane comprehended readily, but as she had nothing to offer she let the hint go unnoticed.

"The trip is certainly terrible," she agreed. "Coming home on those ferries and trolleys nearly drives me wild sometimes."

"But it's worth while after all," vouchsafed her neighbor, "I don't know what I would do if I didn't just pick up and go where I can breathe the air of Manhattan once in a while. And the matinees! I used to go two or three times a week when I had my little flat in Amsterdam avenue. I just love the theaters. Didn't you think the show this afternoon was lovely,"

"No, I didn't," Jane answered, "I just hated it. That beautiful home, those servants and those lovely gowns. As if anyone could believe that heroine could be unhappy with all she had. And it does seem as if those things were going to be out of reach forever."

The play, in so far as material environment was concerned, had presented the very antithesis of their own life. All the luxuries and indulgences that money can give were vividly portrayed, but the sequel proved the indisputable maxim, "all that glitters is not gold." Jane had an innate longing for a more lofty station in life than was hers. She believed that poverty and its petty exactions were her worst foes and that any woman, given the opportunities that money bestows, had the making of happiness within her hands. She had no sympathy or tolerance for the theory that wealth breeds discontent and woe. Mrs. Collins, on the other hand, while not gifted with an analytical mind, had a rough and ready sense of perceptive. She was as fond of good things in life as one, but she was actuated in her longings by a spirit of jealousy rather than the belief that the best was rightfully hers. So she sympathized with the hoi polloi and rejoiced when the wealthy heroine wept. While she did not observe the fine distinction between herself and Jane, she recognized their common bond of complaint and attempted solace.

"I know just how you feel, my dear," she said. "All my younger days were wasted on sentiment and when I finally let my heart run away with my caution I landed on Staten Island."

"But I suppose we ought to be happy," Jane ventured resignedly. "We have our homes and I know I have the best husband in the world."

"That's what they all say. Oh, mind you, I am not complaining about mine, but there are times I am aggravated by the smallness of his income."

"But we mustn't think of money, Mrs. Collins. After all, we are out here in the country with the fresh air and sunshine and when we think of all those people in the crowded tenements in New York, who are so much worse off than we are, I suppose we ought to be contented."

"That's all very nice, Mrs. Reynolds, but the fresh air don't chop the kindling wood or put quarters in the gas meters. Those that prefer the country can have it. For my part I would rather be in my little flat with someone around. Here it's shut up the house all winter to keep the warm air in and fight all summer to keep the mosquitoes out. Why, even the cats sneak away from Staten Island when it's cold."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Dinner Stories

Robert W. Chambers tells a story about a friend of his who is an author.

"This young novelist," relates Chambers, "had a pretty hard time of it at first, and so had his young wife. Money was scarce and the stories he wrote did not sell. The wife had but little respect for his talents and kept endeavoring to coax him to try something else whereby he could make enough money for their support.

"One day, however, his luck changed, and he began to make money. The time soon arrived when he was able to write a check for $100 and present it to his wife as a gift.

"She looked at it and her eyes filled with tears.

"'What is the trouble?' the husband asked in surprise.

"'Darling,' she said as she hastened around the table and put her arms around his neck, 'I'll take back all the mean things I ever said about your writing. This is the best thing you ever wrote.'"

A little while ago Jones managed to get a good record of his parrot's cries on a cylinder. By way of experiment he set it going while Fa was in the room.

"Pretty Poll! Scratch a Poll! Gi me a bit of sugar, uncle!" whirre the machine.

"I want some sugar, some sugar!" came from the graphophone.

"Great Scott," screeched Polly, s she looked down the trumpet. "Wh a beak for sweet stuff!"

Use Gasoline Gas For Lighting and Cooking

With the Giant Gas Machine you can do your cooking and lighting either in your city or country home. This machine is an innovation in the home as it makes gas out of gasoline at a cost of from 70 to 5 cents per thousand feet.

They are absolutely safe as the Gasoline is buried in the ground to the depth of from 8 ft. to 10 ft.

We are putting these machines in on trial and if not entirely satisfactory we take them out at no expense whatever to the user. We will have a complete plant in operation at the Janesville Fair next week and will be pleased to give a demonstration of what we can do with it. Call and see it.

Beautiful Monuments

In selecting a monument the first consideration should be the quality of the granite, for wtihout durablity the effect of beautiful designing and lettering would gradually wear off in a few years of exposure to the elements.

The several kinds of granites we keep in stock are of the best quality of durableness as well as being beautiful.

The first chance you get to visit our Monument Works, we want to show you the line of selected stock we carry. It will be an easy matter for you to decide upon the kind that most appeals to you.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Aug. 8, 1874.—Arthur Pankhurst, a lad about eleven years of age, was found in an insensible state in a field near his father's residence yesterday afternoon. He had probably been thrown by the horse he had been riding. Dr. Palmer, having been called in, found the skull badly fractured to the extent of five and a half square inches, most of the bone having been removed. The boy is doing surprisingly well under the severe visitation. It is not easy to understand how the accident could have happened and no information can be obtained from the poor lad who is insensible.

A dog supposed to be mad was shot at repeatedly this morning in Main street. The number of shooters is at best problematical and the quantity of swan shot poured into the poor animal convinced, however reluctantly, that Janesville is death on dog fits.

Work has stopped at the artesian well for the present. The gravel from a depth of 600 feet, seen under a microscope, resembles quarts pebbles.

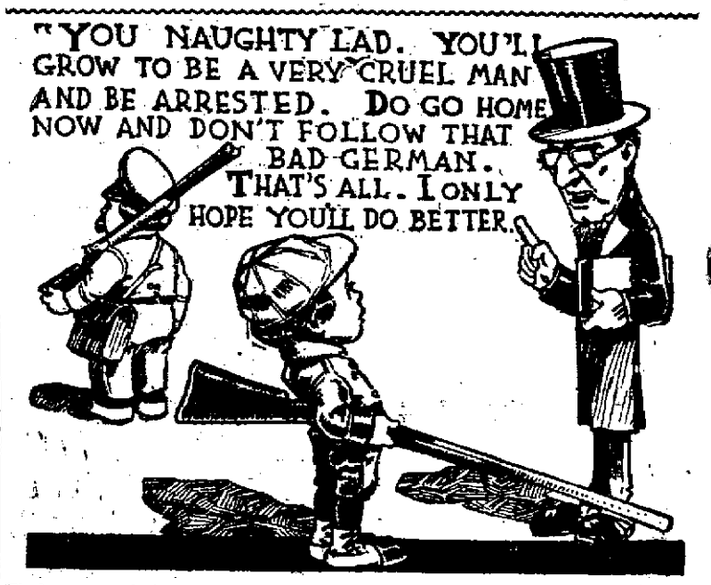

There is much interest expressed in the proposal to establish a boating club in this city. The meeting is called for Monday night.

A harmless lunatic has been interviewing several of our citizens perhaps under the impression that he is connected with the Chicago Times; no evil results are anticipated, however.

The Elkhorn baseball players arrived in this city about eleven o'clock and commenced soon after three o'clock to play before a large assemblage. The Elkhorn players are reputed as very good players.

The fog during the greater part of last night and this morning was almost equal to rain. There was a pleasant shower last evenisg.

A sample of barley was exhibited in the corn exchange today. The yield will not be as good this year as last, nor as fine, but it will still be passable.

Find names of six animals.

Ranch-Bred Foxes Best.

While the supply of ranch foxes is on the increase, the wild fox is becoming more scarce. For instance, out of 56 live foxes captured by the Indians in the Yukon district last spring, only two were silver black. The silver gray foxes of this lot commanded $3,600 a pair. There is, besides, a decided superiority to the ranch-bred fox, as the animal is better fed and has the best of care.

A Large Bungalow—By John Henry Newson

"Home of Character" No. 114

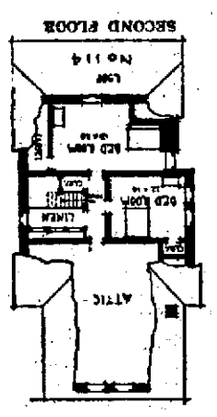

A cement bungalow for a large family with more room than is usually provided in this class of home. We would suggest a color scheme for the exterior, similar to that described in No. 101.

FIRST FLOOR

A glance at this floor plan will reveal the absolute privacy of the sleeping quarters from the living rooms. The kitchen is so arranged that the pantry keeps the odors of cooking from both the dining room and bedrooms. The stairway to second floor is conveniently placed with relation to the living room and at the same time gives access from the second floor bedrooms to the bath without passing through living rooms. Closets are ample and a linen closet with drawers and shelves is provded at the head of the stairs. The rear portion of second floor provides a large attic, and a second bath or extra bedroom may be added to this floor.

No. 114—Size 30x53 feet. Cost $3500. Can be built for from $1400 to $4200, depending on type of construction used. The low figure would be as a summer cottage, without plaster, heating plant or plumbing.

Any further information desired if you mention number of house and address John Henry Newson, "Homes of Character Dept." The Gazette.

FIRST ANNUAL FAIR

Under the Management of the Janesville Park Association

August 11, 12, 13 and 14

A New Fair Where Everything Will Be Brand New

FOR many months preparations have been under way to make this Fair the biggest and best in Southern Wisconsin. Thousands of dollars have been expended in erecting new buildings, new grandstand, putting the tracks in shape and generally arranging for the great event. You will make no mistake in planning to come to the Janesville Fair. You'll get more than your money's worth. In addition to the livestock, agricultural, floral and fine art exhibits and racing, there will be plenty of music and free feature programs each day of the Fair. Remember Janesville never disappoints and always does just as she advertises.

Four Big Days of Huge Entertainment For You

Tuesday
Children's Day

Music by Moose Band.
Athletic Games and Pony Races for the Children.
Special attractions to interest the children.
Let them have lots of fun on that day. Children free.

Wednesday
Monroe Day

Music by Monroe Band.
Speaking by Hon. Levi Bancroft and Hon. Emanuel Phillips on the political situation.
Free hippodrome and regular program.

Thursday
Janesville Day

Music by Bower City Band.
Judge Karel orator of day.
There will be special races, free hippodrome and free program. On this day Janesville will turn out en masse.

Friday
Edgerton Day

Music by Edgerton Band. Hon. James Clancy and Hon. Thos. S. Richmond speakers of the day. Special prize-winning stock parade at 12:30 in addition to regular and special features.

Prof. Dubrook's Society Hippodrome: This great feature will be given on each of the four days of the Fair. Genuine English fox hunt with a pack of hounds. Hurdle Jumpers, Pony Polo, High School Horses and Novelty Features never seen here before. Any of these features worth alone the price of admission.

The Racing Programs: These events will not be approached by any given elsewhere. Much time and energy has been expended in securing the numerous high class entries that are registered. Many notable speeders will be seen in action.

Special For Young America On Tuesday

100 Yard Dash for boys under 12 years: 1st prize, $1.00; 2nd prize, 50c.

100 Yard Dash for boys under 16 years: first prize, $1.00; 2nd prize, 50c.
